Select Poetry.
THE OLD COUPLE.
It stands in a sunny meadow,
The house so mossy grown,
With its chimney stone chimney,
And the grey roof sloping down.
The first fold their green arms around it,
The trees a century old,
And the winds go chaunting thro' them,
And the sunbeams drop their gold;
The cowbells ring in the marshes, And the roses bloom on the hill—A beak the brook in the pasture, The herds go feeding at will.
The children have gone and left them, They sit in the shade,
And the old wife's ears are failing,
As she looks to the well known tone That won her heart in her girlhood, That has soothed her in many a care,
And pruned her now for the brightness Her old eyes ought to wear.
She thinks again of her bridegroom, who once was so white, She stood by her gay young lover,
In the morning's rosy light.
Oh! the morning is so gay and bright, But the sun is not so bright as he,
And the sunshine still is golden,
But it falls on a silvered head.
And the girlhood dreams, once vanished, Come back in her winter time, Till her feet feel pulses tremble With the thrill of springtime's breeze.
And looking forth from the window, She thinks how the trees have grown, Since, e'en in her bridal whiteness, She crossed the old door-stone.
Though dimmed her eyes be bright,
And dimmed her hair's young gold,
The love in her girlhood's pledge Has never grown dim, nor old.
They sat in their place in the sunshine, Till the day was almost done,
And then, as the sun went down, He stole her the threshold stone.
He folded their hands together,
And they were wedded then;
And their first breath blown upward, Like the close of a solemn psalm.
Like a bride pair they traversed The uneven rocky road, That leads to the beautiful city, "Where the builder and maker is God."

THE BROTHER THIEVES.
The earliest pieces of theft we can at present call to mind, are the removal of her father's household goods by Rachel, and the plundering of the pleasure boat by the "Famments," the rich and learned king of Egypt, this last exploit being left on record by Herodotus, most delightful of historians.
This wise and rich monarch got a strong room built for the preservation of his immense treasures, but he scarcely showed his wisdom in allowing its outward wall to be accessible to all comers, for it formed a portion of the boundary of the royal fortress. The cunning architect contrived that one large stone extending the entire breadth of the wall, might be easily removed without leaving any perceptible interstice, and when his death bed he bequeathed the secret to his two sons. These youths, soon after paying the last respects to their father's memory, repaired by night to the tower, removed the stone, and being unable to explain the mode, and getting into the chamber, conveyed away some of its most precious contents.— This was only the first visit, and the king, on his repeated inspections, found the treasures diminishing, but without the slightest clue as to the mis-famous means employed. The inner surface of the wall showed not the slightest flaw, and to the stroke of the hammer every portion answered with a uniform solidity. The seals placed on the door had just gone out, and were un-tampered with on every succeeding visit, and the poor king's perplexity advanced to an alarming point. However, something should be done, and the king, on the report of his ministers, prepared to examine the machine and found no possible mode of escape.
The captured man then proposed to his brother to behold him, and thus save the lives of the family. On the free man expressing his repugnance to the deed, he answered, "My life is forfeited whether you take it or not. If you refuse, you needlessly sacrifice your mother's life and your own." This view of the case decided the brother for the horrid deed. The head was carried away, and the stone replaced.
The baffled king on finding the headless corpse, had still to endure the annoyance of knowing one tormentor at least still at large. His next proceeding was to have the body suspended from a gibbet and closely watched, the watchmen being privately instructed to take into custody all who seemed affected by sorrow at the sight.
The prisoners, on the ears of mother and brother, a council was held to save their dear relative from annihilation.
Next evening the guards remarked a clown driving along an ass laden with wine skins; and just as he passed, and they were looking with much confidence on the man, the ass, the clown, and the neck of one of them came loose, and out began to run the odorous red stream. On rushed the men in the courteous fashion to prevent the precious wine from being lost, and the ungrateful deed. Some made its way down their throats; and the neck of another skin being loosened by chance, a further distribution took place, the owner lamenting his mishap aloud. However, as there was no cure for spilled liquor, the king, on the report of his ministers, and getting exalted, (in appearance,) he said he did not mind opening another skin and drowning sorrow.— The festival came to an end later in the night, every guard lying supine and indifferently on the result. The clown, on other words, the brother, then shaved half the hair off of every man's head, and freeing the poor remains from the gibbet, had them conveyed home, embalmed, and united to the head.
The king was at first highly enraged, but he soon turned his thoughts to the apprehension of the very talented criminal. By proclamation he made known that his daughter was about selecting a husband, and that persons of any rank were invited to give their names, the mode being thus arranged: The suits were admitted to a certain darkened room in the palace, and the princess sat at a casement communicating with this room. She asked him certain questions, and the answers were not satisfactory, he was allowed to depart unharmful and unnoticed. The individual whose answers pleased the lady, would be her future spouse.
After several had undergone the trial, the accepted man presented himself.
Being laid under awful obligations to speak the truth, he was told in the sweet but stately tones of the royal lady to reveal the most painful and the most joyful incident of his past life. Dreadful the consequences of an untruth, he accepted the challenge, and his brother was the most sorrowful, and the recovery of his body the most joyful of all events of his life.
"You are the man," said she, firmly grasping his hand, "I will not let my owner do not attempt to withdraw."
"Lights here!" Domestic crowded into the darkened rooms with flambeau, but there was no man within the outer apartment, and the lady found herself in possession of the arm of a man lately dead. The woeer, fearing bad faith, had come prepared.
Famments being now at his wit's end, publicly invited his tormentor to present himself, giving such a pledge as even the king of Egypt could not fail to ratify, that he would bona fide pardon him, and never visit him in prison, and was soon gratified by the appearance of the outlaw, and neither honor his daughter was ever after heard to complain of the new accession to the royal line of Egyptian kings.
