

Be Clean and Tidy.
"When I was six years old," says a well known merchant, "my father died, leaving nothing to my mother but the charge of myself and two young sisters. After selling the greater part of the household furniture, she owned she took two small rooms in W street, and there, by her needle, contrived in some way how I cannot tell, when I recollect the little money for which she worked to support us in comfort. Frequently, however, I remember that our supper was simply a slice of bread, seasoned by hunger, and made inviting by the neat manner in which our meal was served, our table always being spread with a cloth which, like my good mother's heart, seemed ever to preserve a snowy white purity."
"Wiping his eyes, the merchant continued:
"Speaking of those days reminds me of the time we sat down to the table one evening, and my mother having asked the blessing of our Heavenly Father on her little innocents, in a tone of tenderness that never, yet, she divided the remnant of her only loaf into three pieces, placing one on each of our plates, but reserving none for herself. I stole round to her, and was about to tell her that I was not hungry, when a flood of tears burst from her eyes, and she clasped me to her bosom.
"Our meal was left untouched; we sat up late that night, and what we said I cannot tell. I know that my mother talked to me more as a companion than a child. When we knelt down to pray, I gave up myself to be the Lord's, and to serve my mother.
"But," said he, "this is not telling you how neatness made my fortune. It was some time after this that my mother found an advertisement in the newspaper for an errand boy in a commission house in B street.
"Without being needful to wait to have my clothes mended, for my mother always kept them in good order, and although, on close inspection, they bore traces of more than one patch, to the whole, they looked very neat, without waiting to arrange my hair, or clean my shoes, for I was obliged to observe, from my earliest youth, the most perfect neatness as a condition of my mother's love. To see if I could obtain the situation, with a light step I started, for I had long wished my mother to allow me to do something to assist her.
"My heart beat fast, I assure you, as I turned out of W into B street, and made my way along to the number my mother had given me. I summoned all the courage I could muster, and stepped briskly into the warehouse, and found my way into the counting house, and made known the object of my calling. The merchant smiled, and told me there was another boy who had come to the office, and that he thought he should engage. However, he asked me some questions, and went out and talked with the other boy, who stood in the back part of the office.
"The result was the lad had been dismissed, and I entered the merchant's employment, first as errand boy, then as a clerk, afterwards as a partner until his death, when he left me the whole of the stock in trade. After I had been in his service some years, he told me the reason he chose me in preference to the other boy, was because of the general neatness of my person; and with reference to the other boy, he noticed that he neglected to be tidy. To this simple circumstance has probably been owing the greater part of my success in business."

How to Breathe.
There is one rule to be observed in taking exercise by walking—the very best form in which it can be taken by the young and able-bodied of all ages—and that is, never to allow the action of respiration to be carried on through the mouth. The nasal passages are clearly the medium through which respiration should be carried on. "God breathed into man's nostrils the breath of life," previous to his becoming a living creature. The difference in the exhaustion of strength by a long walk with the mouth firmly closed, and respiration carried on through the nostrils instead of through the mouth, is inconceivable to those who have never tried the experiment. Indeed, this mischievous and really unnatural habit of carrying on the work of respiration and expiration through the mouth, instead of through the nasal passages, is the true origin of almost all the diseases of the throat and lungs, as bronchitis, congestion, asthma, and even consumption itself. That excessive perspiration to which some individuals are so liable, is the result of breathing through the mouth, instead of through the nostrils. And the same unpleasant and exhaustive results arise to the animal system from walking with the mouth open, instead of when not engaged in conversation, breathing through the lips in a state of firm but quiet compression. As the heat and velocity of the blood through the lungs depend almost entirely upon the quantity of the atmospheric air inhaled with each inspiration—and it is unavoidable that it should be inhaled through the mouth, by the mouth, while it can only be supplied in moderate quantities, and just in sufficient proportion to serve the purpose of a healthy respiratory action, while supplied through the nostrils—it is clear that the body is much lighter and cooler, and the breathing much freer and easier, when the latter course rather than the former is the one adopted. Children ought never to be allowed to stand or walk with their mouths open; for, besides the want of appearance it gives to the countenance, it is the certain precursor of coughs, colds and sore throats.
Why is kissing your sweetheart like eating soup with a fork? Because it takes a long time to get enough of it.

FROM THE LARGEST MANUFACTURING CHEMIST IN THE WORLD.
I am acquainted with M. T. Helmholt, he occupied the drug store opposite my residence, and was successful in conducting the business where other had not been equally so before him. I have been favorably impressed with his character and enterprise.

[From the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin, March 10.]
We are gratified to hear of the continued success in New York, of our townsman, Mr. H. T. Helmholt, Druggist. His store, next to the Metropolitan Hotel, is 28 feet front, 230 feet deep, and five stories in height. It is certainly a grand establishment, and speaks favorably of the merit of his articles. He retains his office as a Laboratory in this city, which are also model establishments of their class.
The proprietor has been induced to make this statement from the fact that his remedies, although advertised, are
GENUINE PREPARATIONS,
And, knowing that the intelligent refrain from using any thing pertaining to Quackery, or the Patent Medicine order—most of which are prepared by self styled Doctors, who are too ignorant of the merit of their articles. He retains his office as a Laboratory in this city, which are also model establishments of their class.
THESE PARTIES RESORT to various means of effecting sales, such as copying parts of advertisements of popular remedies, and finishing with certificates.
The Science of Medicine stands SIMPLE, PURE, and MAJESTIC—trusting fact for its Basis, Induction for its Pillar, Truth alone for its Capital.
A WORD OF CAUTION.
Health is most important; and the afflicted should not use an advertised medicine, or any remedy, unless its contents or ingredients are known to others besides the manufacturer, or until they are satisfied of the qualifications of the party so offering.
