long ago.
When, after the peace of 1814 was concluded, the continent was once more. opened, every one that remembers it knows how gladly the English availed themselves of it to leave their island home, and seek, some health, others pleasures, in the complete change of scene and life. My husband and I also shared the clamest universal "fureur." shared the almost universal "fureur," and went to France. There, however, our wanderings ceased for a time—for when we arrived at the picturesque old town of D—, we were agreeably surprised to find some old friends there.—
Boon after, others arrived, and we yielded to their wishes that we should remain main.

In those days the English drew closely to each other. Now, when abroad, you must be careful of making acquaintments be careful of making acquaintments. ance, till you know your compatriot's motives for absenting himself from his native land. Our little coterie became intimate friends.

Our house was in a central situation as regarded those of our friends; though it was in the town, it had a small gar-den before it, and a gravelled path led to the hall door.

My husband was fond of society; I am still, I must own, though too old to am still, I must own, though too old to enter into its spirit as formerly. Our house was always open to our friends, but we were especially glad to see them of an evening; then music and the whist table whiled away the hours till half past nine, when the supper tray appeared, and at ten o'clock our last guest departed.

Those were primitive times! Of all our acquaintances, the person I was most drawn to was a Mrs. Norris, a very pretty young woman, light-hearted, and always cheerful. All the most severe critic would blame her for, was perhaps an extreme love of amusement. She was my constant guest. Her husband was in the army, and, at the time I speak of, was quartered in Ireland.— Mrs. Norris was anxious to give her four children a better education than their limited means could procure in Eng-

Capt. Norris had only just left Dto join his regiment, and had expressed his wish that I would "look after" his wife and assist her with advice, or in any way that might be necessary.

Of all the Norris children, Louisa was her father's favorite, but her mother always disliked her, apparently, if one can use the word dislike to describe a mother's harshness to her child. I used to think Mrs. Norris was severe to Louisa because she feated her being spoiled by her father's indulgence. I afterwards found that the mother's harshness caused the father's favor.

One evening our small circle assembled as usual at our house, and dispersed about ten o'clock, Mrs. Norris being the first to leave. When my husband and I were alone, we chatted over the little incidents and gossips of the evening. At last I took my candle and went to my room, a front one. I had undressed, when I heard a noise at the window like hail rattling against it. Knowing that the night had been very fine, I drew back my curtain in surprise, and saw Mrs. Norris standing on the path.

The servants had long gone to bed, so I hurriedly threw my dressing wrapper around me, and ran down stairs.

When I had opened the hall door, before I had time to ask a question, Mrs.

Norris exclaimed:

Norns exclaimed:

"Oh! I fear something dreadful has happened to Charles!"

"Why do you think so?" I said;—

"have you heard anything of him?"

"No," she answered, "I have not heard of or from him lately." heard of or from him lately; yet, as you know, I was not uneasy about him and was quite happy and cheerful with you this evening. I left you early to go to my children; they were all asleep; I went to bed directly, but in about ten minutes after, by the light of the night lemp I saw my husband standing by lamp, I saw my husband standing by my bedside; he had a fearful gash in his throat, from which the blood was pouring. He spoke to me and said— 'Farewell, be kind to poor Lou.' In a momenthe disappeared. When I could collect my thoughts, I dressed, and came to you, my dear friend, to tell you I fear something dreadful has happened to my husband, and I must go to him. Will you look after my children till my return?' Traveling in those days was a most disagreeable process; the slowness, cold, dirt, and misery of sailing vessels and coaches, made people generally reflect a good deal before they undertook a journey, unless they could afford to travel by rost. It therefore tried to persuade by post. I therefore tried to persuade Mrs. Norris that she had only dreamed of her husband.

"I had not even closed my eyes," she replied; "and I saw him as plainly as I do you."

Then I tried to persuade her to wait for the arrival of the next mail from England.

"No," she said, "he might be dying nice for medical use, which will be sold at the even while we are standing consulting lowest cash price. I have also a large stock of together."

I asked what she thought most likely to have befallen him.
"He might be fatally wounded, if not killed in a duel."

I saw that it was useless trying to dis suade Mrs. Norris, so I now hurriedly dressed, and helped her preparations for departure, promising to be a mother to the children in her absence.

She was the only inside passenger by the coach, and to beguile her sad reflec-tions, bought a newspaper at the first town where they stopped to change horses. At the next stoppage the guard found my poor friend senseless.

She had found in the paper an account of the death of Captain Norris by suicide, at the very moment she had seen this apparition.

his apparition.
When Mrs. Norris returned to her children, and had in some degree recov-GINGER, CORN STARCH, ESSENCE ered from this awful shock, she spoke with calmness of what she called her "last interview" with her husband. I remarked that even if she had draamed closed her eyes, and but just extinguished her candle. So I said no more; but it, it would have been extraordinary.— She was firm in asserting she had not other friends were more pertinacious in insisting his presence could not have been a reality. Her answer was invariably, "I saw him as plainly as I see you."

A clergyman was depicting before a deeply interesting audience the alarming increase of intemperance, when he astonished his hearers by exclaiming:
"A woman in my neighborhood died very suddenly last Sabbath while I was preaching the gospel in a state of beastly intozication."

After quoting from John Locke, that a blind mun took his idea of scarlet from the sound, of a brumpet, a witty fellow says that a hoopskirt hanging out of a shop door reminds him of the pest of a bell.

WHITE WASH LIME,

HENDERSON'S HAND POWER LOOM.

This foom will do all kinds of hand weaving.
It will weave jeans, blankets, plain cjoth, satinet, kersey, flannel, seamless anch, double width blankets, or any kind of cotton, wool, or flax cloth. It treads the treadles, throws the shuttle, lets off the web, and takes up the cloth. It makes the upper shed as the batten comes forward, and beats up the filling after the cross is made, making better cloth and better selvage than can be made in any other way.

It is the only hand loom that is suitable for meaning wool,

WM. WEIGHTMAN, (Firm of Powers & Weightman,) Manufacturing Chemists

[From the Philada Evening Bulletin, Macrh 10.] We are gratified to hear of the continued success, in New York, of our townsman, Mr. H. T. Helmbold, Druggist. His store, next to the Metropolitan Hotel, is 28 feet front, 230 feet deep, and five stories in height. It is certainly a grand establishment, and speaks favorably of the merit of his articles. He retains his office and Libertory in this city, which are also model.

The proprietor has been induced to make this statement from the fact that his remedies.

the well known Woolen Factory of Messrs.
