

"To be rich," said Mr. Marcy, formerly Secretary of State, requires only a satisfactory condition of mind. One man may be rich with a hundred dollars, while another, in the possession of millions, may think himself poor; and if the necessities of life are enjoyed by each, it is evident that the man who is best satisfied with his possession is the richest.

To illustrate this idea, Mr. Marcy related the following anecdote: "While I was Governor of the State of New York," said he, "I was called upon one morning at my office, by a rough specimen of a backwoodsman, who stalked in and commenced conversation by inquiring 'if this was Mr. Marcy?'"

"I replied that was my name," "Bill Marcy?" said he. "I nodded assent."

"Used to live in Southport, didn't ye?"

"I answered yes, and began to feel a little curious to know who my visitor was, and what he was driving at."

"That's what I told 'em," cried the backwoodsman, bringing his hand down on his thigh with tremendous force. "I told 'em you was the same Bill Marcy who used to live in Southport, but they wouldn't believe it, and I promised the next time I come to Albany to come and see you, and find out for sartain."

"Why, you know me, don't you, Bill?"

"I didn't exactly like to ignore his acquaintance altogether, but for the life of me I couldn't recollect having seen him before," I replied, "but I had a faint remembrance, but that I was not able to call him by name."

"My name is Jack Smith," answered the backwoodsman, "and we used to go to school together thirty years ago, in the little red school house in old Southport. Well, times have changed since then, and you have become a great man, and got rich I suppose."

"I shook my head, and was going to contradict that impression, when he broke in:

"Oh yes you are, I know you are rich—no use denying it. You was Comptroller for— for a long time, and the next time we heard of you, you were Governor. You must have had a heap of money, and I am glad it—glad to see you are getting along so smart. You were always a smart lad at school, and I knew that you would come to something."

"I thanked him for his good wishes and opinion, but told him that political life did not pay so well as he imagined."

"I suppose," said I, "fortune has smiled upon you since you left."

"Oh yes," he replied, "I haint got nothing to complain of. I must say I have got along right smart. You see, shortly after you left Southport, our whole family moved up into Vermont, and went right into the woods, and I reckon our family out down more trees and cleared more land than any other in the whole State."

"And so you have made a good thing of it. How much do you consider yourself worth?" I asked, feeling a little curious to know what he considered a fortune, as he seemed to be so well satisfied with his.

"Well," he replied, "I don't know exactly how much I am worth; but I think, (straightening himself up,) if all my debts were paid, I should be worth three hundred dollars clear cash!" He was rich—for he was satisfied.

Qualities of Hay.

Timothy for muscle; clover for milk; corn for fat. The timothy should be cured in full blossom, or a little later.

Clover should be cut when first reddening, before it is fully matured. This is the time, and the only time, to cut clover. Then all the nutritive juices are in perfection. Such hay, or grass cured, has a slight laxative tendency—just what is wanted in winter. It will be greedily eaten, even when somewhat touched with mold, and give much profit.

This never fails. On the other hand, timothy, instead of secreting milk, will form muscle; hence the hay for horses, and hence preferred so generally. Straw, when early cut and properly cured—not dried—has somewhat the quality of clover. But oh, how neglectful we are about the curing of straw, when it is one of the finest employments. There is a fragrance about such straw, and the pale green tint, which make it a valuable and most pleasant fodder.

Timothy, for horses; clover for milk cows; and straw, well cured and cut, for either. It is excellent to mix with meal, or feed carrots and beets with. We would, when thus fed, make but little difference between good barley or even oat straw, when early and properly cured, and timothy for stock, especially cows in milk. For young stock, tender timothy is excellent. We are so reckless in feeding. We feed promiscuously; we feed what we have to feed without taking much pains to get a proper selection, or to prepare it well. For instance, we feed cornstalks, raised for purpose for fodder, when this is one of the cheapest and one of the best hays that can be fed; and in the summer, in a drought, it is of the greatest advantage, fed out green.—Rural World.

To CURE A KICKING HORSE.—I saw the following recipe in an agricultural paper, and have proved it to my entire satisfaction. Fasten a rope to the fore foot and pass it over the belly band back to the driver. With this there will be no trouble to the driver in holding up the foot whenever the horse tries to kick, and discouraging trouble to the horse, and a trouble he will never get into again being involved in many times. With the string thus in your hand, and a patient determination under all circumstances not to lose your patience with the animal, any kicking can be cured.

CHILDREN.—In our early youth, while yet we live only among those we love, we love without restraint, and our hearts overflow in every look, word, and action. But when we enter the world, and are repulsed by strangers, forgotten by friends, we grow more and more timid in our approaches even to those we love best. How delightful to us, then are the little carresses of children! All sincerity, all affection, they fly into our arms; and then, and then only, we feel our first confidence, our first pleasure.

A little girl, after having been in church, was very fond of preaching to her dolls. Her mother overheard her one day reproving one for being so wicked. "Oh, you naughty, sinful child," she said, shaking its waxen limbs, "you will just go to that place of brimstone and molasses, and you won't burn up—you will just sizzle."

At a recent marriage in England, the bride started the minister by making the extraordinary vow to take her husband "to have and to hold from this day forth, for better, for richer, for poorer, in sickness and in health, to love and to cherish, else to love cherries and to say."

"Ah, Mr. Simkins, we have not chairs enough," said a lady to a young man who was to be a guest at a wedding. "Plenty of chairs my dear, but a little too much company."

also, in

BED, & HORSE BLANKETS.

The advantage to my

are not to be misunderstood, when the steady and unexampled increase of business is taken into the account. I say without the fear of contradiction, that with the large purchases I am making from month to month for cash, I can sell to the country trade as low as they can buy in the city, including freight, which gives me an opportunity to offer to the Retail trade, which I am doing and bound to do as a testimonial of my gratitude for the many favors and very liberal patronage.

Will give my customers the benefit of any change in the market as I am posted in auction and other sales from day to day by telegraph and otherwise.

H. GOFF.

Hand Power Loom—Patented 1865. ALL persons interested in the production of practical machinery in our country, are requested to investigate the merits of HENDERSON'S HAND POWER LOOM. This loom will do all kinds of hand weaving. It will weave jeans, blankets, plain cloth, satinet, heavy flannel, seamless silk, double width blankets, or any kind of cotton, wool, or flax cloth. It treats the threads, throws the shuttle, lets off the web, and takes up the cloth. It makes the upper shed as the bottom loom forward, and beats up the filling after the cross is made, making better cloth and better selvedge than can be made in any other way.

It is the only hand loom that is suitable for weaving wool, as no loom makes all the shed as the bottom does, will weave wool satisfactorily. It has no strings to stretch and get out of order; has treadles at both sides of the loom, making the shed complete at both sides. This loom is made to weave the different kinds of cloth, by simply changing the plan that make the upper Township right for sale. Call at Mainburg, Tioga County, Pa., and see a full sized loom in operation. Or, send for a full sized loom in operation. G. H. HENDERSON, Mainburg, May 2, 60-ly. A. F. PACKARD.

FROM THE LARGEST MANUFACTURING CHEMIST IN THE WORLD.

I am acquainted with H. T. Helmbold; he is successful in conducting the business where he has been favorably impressed with his character and enterprise.

WM. WEIGHTMAN, (Firm) Proprietors of Helmbold's Manufacturing Chemist, Ninth and Brown Streets, Philadelphia.

[From the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin, March 10.] We are gratified to hear of the continued success in New York, of our townsman, Mr. H. T. Helmbold. Druggist. His store, next to the Metropolitan Hotel, is 25 feet front, 23 feet deep, and five stories in height. It is certainly a grand establishment, and speaks favorably of the merit of his articles. He retains his City and Laboratory in this city, which are also establishments of his class.

The proprietor has been induced to make this statement from the fact that his remedies, although advertised, are GENUINE PREPARATIONS, And, knowing that the intelligent refrain from using any thing pertaining to Quackery, or the Patent Medicine order—most of which are prepared by self styled Doctors, who are too ignorant to read a physician's simplest prescription, and less competent to prepare pharmaceutical preparations.

THESE PARTIES RESORT to various means of affecting sales, such as selling large quantities of advertisements of popular cathartics and finishing with certificates.

The Science of Medicine stands SIMPLE, PURE, and MAJESTIC—having Part in Basis, Induction for its Pillar, Truth above its Capital.

A WORD OF CAUTION. Health is most important; and the individual should not use an advertised medicine, or any remedy, unless its contents or ingredients are known to others besides the manufacturer, and until they are satisfied of the qualifications of the party so offering.
