"They could get back easily enough if they showed sincere repentance for their treason and gave guaranty against a repetition of their war on loyal men and loyal interests. Let them pass the constitutional amendment, and form inyal State governments, like Tennes-see, and like her they can gain admis-sion for their Senators and Representatives."

"I don't believe in tinkering at the Constitution. Why do you want to change it?"

Because that is the only practical way of making a permanent treaty of peace with the rebel States, and the only way of adapting the government of the country to the changed condition produced by the war. You know that while we were in camp, Hiester Clymer and the Copperheads in Pennsylvania tried to prevent us from voting at all; and the State Constitution was changed to give soldiers the right of suffrage.

If the federal Constitution is not amended now, and the rebel Congressmen are admitted, each rebel soldier will have twice as much control over the federal Government as you or I. If you are ready to submit to that, I am not." "That's rather hard, I must confess.

Wilkes Booth and his work.

A series of resolutions were reported by Senator Cowan, the substance of which is as follows:

The President lays great stress on the loyalty of the South. Loyalty of the South! Love of country, that displays itself in violating the laws of the country, is a beautiful loyalty, indeed! Love of country, that manufacts itself in him. of country that manifests itself in brutal and ferocious assaults on men who Congress and the next electoral college, and Congress cannot deny it. | tai and teroclous assuring their country, is a lovely loyalty!—lovely! We have the sublime spectacle of men rolling up their eyes in holy horror at the danger to the Constitution, who for four years trampled that Constitution under foot, and

No have the sulface of the matter to devise the right of a state to second, and the state of the feeling. Remove the army, and instantly the South would be one vast hotbed of lawlessness and rampant treason. The revolver and bowie knife would reign again supreme. Even to-day there is no safety of life or limb for a Northern man in the interior districts. Talk about Southern lovalty and patriotism! It's flying in the face of Hea-

Now what is the difference-in the animus or the enormity of the crimebetween assassinating peaceable, loyal, unarmed citizens, in the streets of New Orleans, and firing upon Massachusetts soldiers in the streets of Baltimore"-Why call them by different names?of war gleams beneath the smouldering ashes, fanned by a man who has been both acts? And what has caused this well called a political Judas; who would betray loyalty into the hands of treason!

Political incendiaries, like human In the quiet country village of L-lived young Tom Burton. He had an insufferable amount of vanity, and was continually prating about his adventures with men, beasts and creeping things. To hear his own story, he was the hero of a thousand bloody encounters. Jack Hood determined to put his courage to the test. Coming to him one afternoon, greatly agitated, Hood said: "Burton, a person has threatened to shoot me to-day, and I want to know whether I can rely on you for assist-hend injured!" Proceeding down the street arm in arm, according to the arrangement, some one suddenly stepped from behind a building and commenced firing rapid shots at Hood. Burton thought that it would be his turn next, and seeing his companion in arms fall, took "leg bail," and was soon out of all danger: As soon as he was fairly out of sight, Hood eoolly arose and concealed himself, to watch further developements. In the course of several hours Burton returned to town, and seeking the hotel barroom with woful countenance, enquired when poor Hood was going to be buried. The roar of laughter that followed was perfectly stunning, and effectually cured him of his habit of boasting.
