This collection is not to he made alone for the pupils of to-day, but for the generations that come after us. We want, if possible, to make day, but för the generations that come after us. We want, if possible, to make this institution a great "Store-house of Knowledge," in all its departments, where any and all may come and gather treasure, both new and old. Is not our aim a laudable one" Will you not therefore assist us? It will aid in the advancement of education; it will add to the treasures of science; it will make us better acquainted with Na-ture, God's great book—ever open to us, but read by few; it will make us wiser and better, and consequently happier. Scattered about us in all directions are the treasures of knowledge. Shall ther other, taint your maint. But I aint so almighty taken with her, and you may gether for all me; so you hadn't ought to get savage about nothin." "Well," says he, rather cooled down, "I'm the unluckiest thing in creation. I went tother day to a place where was an old woman died of some disease, and they were sellin out her things. Well they, were sellin out her things. Well. there was a thunderin big chist of drawers, full of all sorts of truck; so I bo't it, and thot I had made a speck; but when I cum to look at 'em, there wasn't nothin in it worth a cent, except an old silver thimble, and that was all rusted up; so I sold it for less than I gave for it. Well, when the chap that bought it took it home, he heard somethin rat-tle-broke the old chist, and found lots of gold in it in a false bottom I hadn't
