Miscellaneous.

One day in early winter my husband received a summons to Burke's settlement, to unite a couple in the bonds of wedlock. It was especially requested that his wife should accompany him, as we should be expected to remain all night and partake of the festivities.

It was twenty miles to the settlement. and we reached the log house of Mr. Burke, the father of the expectant bride, about noon. A' dozen towhaired children were at the door, waiting our arrival. They telegraphed the news in-wing in front of it; his nose is just like dad's-crooked as a cowhorn squash."

from the interior of the cabin, "run out and grab the rooster, add I'll clap him into the pot! Sal you quit that churn and sweep that floor. Kick that corn-dodger under the bed. Bill. you wipe the tallow out of that cheer for the minister's wife, and be spry about it."

Further remarks were cut short by

Mrs. Burke, in calico short gown, blue petticoat and bare feet, came forward, marm? Must excuse my head—haint had chance to comb it since last week. Work must be did, you know. Powerful sharp air, hain't it? Shoo, there! Bill drive that turkey out of the breadtrough. Sal, take the lady's things. Set right up to the fire mam. Hands cold? Well, justrun 'emin Bill'shair—we keep it long a purpose."

Bill presented his shaggy head, but I declined with an involuntary shudder:

nary visitor must have made her careless, for she upset the concern, and but-termilk went swimming over the floor. "Grab the ladle, Bill," cried Mrs.

I was duly commiserated, and at last got to bed. The less said about that night the better. Bill and Divk and four others slept in the same room with a yellow neck ribbon, and white cotton gloves. Her reddish hair was fastened in pug behind, and well adorned with the tail-feathers of the defunct rouster before, mentioned. When it was announced that Lem Lord, the groom, was coming, Sally, dived behind a coverlet, which hung across one corner of the room to conceal sundry pots and kettles, and refused to come forth. Mr. Lord listed one corner bright buttons. The entire suit had been made for his grandfather on a sim-ilar occasion. His hair was well greased with tallow, and his huge feet encased in skin pumps.

Very soon the company began to gather, and the room was well filled.
"Now, elder," cried the bridegroom, 'drive ahead! I want it done up nice ; I am able to pay for the job. hear? Come, father Burke, trot out at all. We argued and coaxed, but she was firm; and it was finally concluded to let her have her own way.

Mr Morrison stood up; the happy couple joined hands through a rent in the coverlet, and the ceremony proceeded. Just as Mr. Morrison was asking Lemuel, "Will you have this woman?" etc., down came the coverlet, enveloping both minister and bridegroom, and filling the house with dust. Dick had been up in the loft and cut the strings which held it. Mr. Morrison crawled out looking decidedly sheepish, and Sally was obliged to be married openly. Then he turned to my husband.

"Now, elder, what is the damage! Don't be afraid to speak." "Whatever you please," said Mr.

Morrison. Lemuel produced a piece of fur.
"There, elder," said he, "There's a nusk-rat's skin; and out in shed is two heads of cabbage, and you're welcome to the whole of it." My husband bowed his thanks, the young people went to dancing, Mrs. Burke went to getting breakfast. At my earnest request Mr. Morrison got our horse, and we bade them adieu. I never could have lived through another meal in that house.

I have since heard that Mr. Lord said if he had seen the elder's wife before and when night came on we began to she was married, Sallie might have feel the want of food and water, but we she was married, Sallie might have gone to the dickens. "Alas, it might have been!"

Shipwreck of the Evening Star-State ment of a Surviving Passenger.

William H. Harris, one of the passen gers who escaped the terrible shipwreck of the steamer Evening Star, which oc-curred recently on the Carolina coast, and which resulted in the loss of about three hundred lives, makes the following statement:

"The mail steamship Evening Star, Captain Knapp, sailed from New York we keep it long a purpose."

Bill presented his shaggy head, but I declined with an involuntary shudder. "Law, if she ain't actually a shivering!" cried Mrs. Burke. "Bring in some more wood. Here mam, take this hot corn-dodger inter yer lap—it's as good as a soapstone."

A fearful squall announced the execution of the rooster, and shortly afterward he was bouncing about in a four ward he was bouncing about in a four ward he was bouncing about in a four the fire. THE VALUE OF A LITTLE.

Do what right and reason tall; Do what wrong and sorrow claim;

Do thy little, though it be

Do thy little ; never mind Though thy brethren be unkind; Though the men who ought to smile,

Do thy little : never fear While thy Saviour standeth near; Let the world its javelines throw, On thy way undaunted go.

Do thy little; God hath made Million leaves for forest shade; Smallest stars their glory bring, God employeth everything.

Do thy little, and when thou Feelest on thy pallid brow, Ere has fied the vital breath, Cold and damp the sweat of death— Then the little thou hast done, Little battles thou hast wen, Little masteries achieved. Little wants with care relieved Little words in love expressed, Little wrongs at once confessed. Little favors kindly done, Little toils thou didst not shun, Little graces meekly worn, Little slights with patience borne-These shall crown thy pillowed head, Holy light upon thee shed; These are treasures that shall rise Far beyond the smiling skies.

Day after day passed, and still the missing member of that distracted family did not return, nor could any tidings of him be heard by his agonized parents, Finally, after every searching party who went out to find the missing one had returned and reported their mission fruitless, and after all hope of ever seeing their darling boy again had vanished from the minds of the afflicted parents, suspicion began to fasten upon the young woman, who was a servant in the family. She again asserted her innocence, and stated that the knew nothing of the missing boy from the time she had sent him homeward. In spite of her protestations, however, she

Thirty Years Captivity Among the Indians. [From the Jackson (Mich.) Citizen.] Thirty years ago, when Jackson was little hamlet of two or three hundred purpose of engaging in the then common pastime of picking berries. The young woman, after toiling away for a while, became annoyed with the ceaseless importunities of the child, and sent him home. She thought nothing more of the pattern ill. of the matter till, upon her return in the evening, she was saferised to find that the boy had not returned. In recharged from custody, still asserting her innocence to the parents of the child, who longed for some tidings that would dispel the uncertainty which hung over them like a cloud. Their hopes however were doomed to disappointment, as nothing could be heard from the missing one, and he was finally numbered with the dead, and the parents gave up all hopes of ever hearing of their lost boy again. Years passed, and the little hamlet be came a large and flourishing city. The solitude which formerly reigned on the bank of the grand river was broken by the mechanic and the artisan, and the air resounded with the busy hum of inflicted, Mr. J. Z. Ballard, our fellow townsman, who was greatly surprised a few days since to learn that the boy, who had long been numbered with the dead, had arrived in the southern part of this State and was making inquiries after his family. The boy had grown to be a stalwart man of thirty-five. His countenance had become bronzed by continuous exposure to the elements, and his sinewy frame hardened by re-peated adventures in the Western wilds. He states that he had but a dim recollection of his former home, but vividly remembered the time when two stalwart forms with red visages crossed his path, snatched him up in their arms, and carried him off amidst his piteous cries for his loving mother. Since that time he has been constantly with the Indians, joined them in their hunting expeditions, and followed their trail as of his aged parents, to make glad the hearts of an afflicted father and mother.
