

MOSESSES.
Next in familiarity to the ferns are the mosses—these delicate little velvety or lacelike plants that spread themselves over the banks of old trees, on moist rocks, upon hedge banks, on old cottage roofs, especially if composed of thatch; they grow, in fact, in almost every habitat that supports life. The flowers of these, though extremely minute, can be made out much more readily than those of ferns. While the plant still seems no more than a tuft of minute leaves, deep down amid the recesses of the foliage there are developed tiny organs analogous to stamens and pistils; the latter, on being fertilized, is elevated upon a stalk as fine as hair, and then we get those pretty little capsules, fat and green, or ruby and half pendulous, that show so conspicuously to the observant eye in early spring. They are more like choice flowers than like seed pods, and are so organized as to exhibit some of the phenomena that pertain to the very highest race of plants. The rim of the capsule is set round, for instance, with delicate and moveable rays, resembling the white border of a daisy, and exhibiting the same kind of sensitiveness to changes of the atmosphere—that is to say, closing when it is moist and clouded, opening out flat when the sun shines and the heaven's breath smells woefully. The seeds are impalpable, minute, and float in the air like the winged ones of thistles, but of course, invisible. When carried or blown against any moist and shady surface, they cling to it and commence active life and in a little while make it seem as if a coat of bright green paint had been overspread there. Mosses, independently of the beauty of their little capsules, are plants that arouse our curious interests. There is good reason to believe that the plant referred to under the name of the "lyssop that springeth out of the wall" was one of their number. Since byssop, properly so called, is neither an inhabitant of walls nor so remarkable for diminutiveness, as to form nearly so suitable a contrast to the cedar of Lebanon, it is pretty certain, at all events, that the allusion is made to something else and the positive arguments are all in favor of its having been mosses that Solomon spoke of. Mosses, like ivy and wall-flowers, consecrate themselves to the ruin. The time worn castle, the roofless abbey, are favorite abodes with them. They love also to grow in rural graveyards, and may often be seen filling up the deep cut letters of the epitaphs. They are too small for the posy or bouquet; not impressive enough for the flower garden; they seem marked out by nature for elegant and sacred purposes that shall be all their own and these they never fail to fulfill. Nature never forgets either her festivities or her tender sympathies. When spring and summer come the chaplets are always ready, whether as gladness, and dipped in odors; when there is anything sad or solemn she is ready again, and with a smile they never in poetical side even to death.—L. H. Grider.

A witty young rascal passing through the town of —, in Alabama, not long since, wanted some whisky, and knowing it could only be obtained by a physician, wrote himself an order, signing it with his own name, to which a learned M. D. was attached. He presented it at the drug store of a gentleman who, though unrecognized by him, proved to be an old acquaintance.
"Hello, Frank," said he, "when did you get to be a doctor?"
"I'm not a doctor."
"Why, what's that M. D. to your name for then?"
"Frank saw he was caught; but determined to make the best of it, put on a very innocent look, and meekly answered:
"Oh, that's for Mighty Dry!"
Of course he got the whisky.

Hartman's Safety Bridle and Lines.
(Patented November 7, 1866.)
This most novel invention prevents all accidents by keeping the reins, and the running away, or kicking of a horse, is utterly impossible.
The subscriber owns the patent for Tiggs, Susquehanna and Bedford counties. Individual or township rights for sale, on favorable terms.
Harness makers who wish to make the lines for their customers who buy individual rights, will be dealt with liberally.
By a slight alteration, the safety lines may be attached to almost any bridle.
All persons are cautioned against making or using the bridle or lines, in the counties aforesaid, without authority from the undersigned.

FLOUR FROM CHOICE WHEAT.
Just published in a sealed envelope. Price six cents. A lecture on the nature, treatment, and radical cure of spermatorrhoea or white discharge, involuntary emissions, sexual debility and impotence, to marriage general Nervous consumption, epilepsy and physical and mental prostration, resulting from self-abuse, &c., by Robert J. Culverwell, M. D., author of the "Green-Book," &c.
The world renowned author, in this admirable lecture, clearly proves from his own experience that the worst consequences of self-abuse may be effectually removed without medicine, and without dangerous surgical operations, leeches, instruments, rings, or cordials, pointing out a mode of cure, once certain and effectual, by which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically. This lecture will prove a boon to thousands and thousands. Sent under seal, to any address, in a plain sealed envelope, on receipt of six cents, or two postage stamps, by addressing
