ccent legislation of Congress the undepiable fact makes itself apparent, that mese 10 political communities are nothing less than States of this Union. At the very commencement of the Rebelion, each House declared, with a unalimity as remarkable as it was significent that the war was not "woord."

pant, that the war was not "waged, non our part, in any spirit of oppression, nor for any purpose of conquest or subjugation, nor purpose of overthrowing or interfering with the rights or established institutions of those States, but to defend and maintain the supremacy of the Constitution and all laws made in pursuance thereof, and to preserve the Union with all the dignity, equality, and rights of the several States unimpaired; and that as soon as these objects were accomplished, the War ought to cease." In some instances, Senators were permitted to continue their legislative functions, while in other instances Representatives were elected and admitted to seats after their States had formally declared their right to be maintained nor our Union preson withdraw from the Union, and were served "by invasions of the rights and endeavoring to maintain that right by force of arms. All of the States whose people were in insurrection, as States; were included in the apportionment of the direct tax of $20,000,000 annually laid upon the United States by the act approved August 5, 1861. Congress, by the act of March 4, 1862, and by the apportionment of representation thereunder, also recognized their presence as States in the Union; and they have, for judicial purposes, been divided into districts, as States alone can be divided. The same recognition appears in the recent legislation in reference to Tennessee, which evidently rests upon the fact that the functions of the State were not destroyed by the Rebellion, but merely suspended; and that principle is, of course, applicable to those States which, like Tennessee, attempted to renounce their places in the Union.
The action of the Executive Department of the Government upon this subject has been equally definite and uniform the control of the Market and Union.

form, and the purpose of the war was specifically stated in the Proclamation issued by my predecessor on the 22d day of September, 1862. It was then soleninly proclaimed and declared that thereafter, as heretofore, the war will be prosecuted for the object of practically restoring the constitutional relation between the United States and each of the States and the people thereof, in which States that relation is or may be suspended or disturbed."
"The recognition of the States by the Judicial Department of the Government has also been clear and conclusive in all proceedings affecting them as States had in the Supreme, Circuit and District

"In the admission of Senators and Representatives from any and all of the States there can be no just ground of legislation, for this could not happen when the Constitution and the laws are enforced by a vigilant and faithful Congress. Each house is made the judge of the elections, returns and qualifications of its own members." When a Senator or Representative presents his certification of election he may at once be admitted or rejected; or should there be any question as to his eligibility, his credentials may be rererred for investigation to the appropriate committee. If admitted to a seat it must be upon evidence satisfactory to the house of which he thus becomes a member that he possesses the requisite constitutional and legal qualifications. If refused admission as a member for want of due allegiance to the Government, and returned to his constituents, they are admonished that none but persons loyal to the United States will be allowed a voice in the legislative councils of the nation, and the political power and moral influence of Congress are thus effectively exerted in the interests of loyalty to the Government and fidelso vitally affecting the restoration of the Union, and the permanency of our present form of government, my convictions, heretofore expressed, have undergone no change; but, on the contrary, their correctness have been confirmed by reflection and time. If the admission of loyal members to seats in the respective houses of Congress was wise and expedient a year ago, it is no less wise and expedient now. If this anomalous condition is right now—if, in the exact condition of these States at the present time, it is lawful to exclude them from representation, I do not see that the question will be changed by the efflux of time. Ten years hence, if these states remain as they are, the right of representation will be no stronger—the right of exclusion will be no weaker. "The constitution of the United States makes it the duty of the President to recommend to the consideration of Congress "such measures as he shall judge necessary or expedient." I know of no measure more imperatively demanded by every consideration of national interest, sound policy, and equal justice, than the admission of loyal members from the now unrepresented States. This would consummate the work of restoration, and exert a most salutary influence in the re-establishment of influence in the re-establishment of peace, harmony, and fraternal feeling. It would tend greatly to renew the confidence of the American people in the vigor and stability of their institutions. It would bind us more closely together as a nation, and enable us to show to the world the inherent and recurrenties reversely as a nation, and enable us to show to the world the inherent and recurrenties reversely as a nation, and enable us to show to the world the inherent and recurrenties reversely as a nation, and enable us to show to the world the inherent and recurrenties. erty, justice, and intelligence. Our increased strength and enhanced prosperity would irrefragably demonstrate the fallacy of the arguments against free institutions drawn from our recent national disorders by the enemies of republican government. The. admission of loval members from the States now excluded from Congress, by allaying doubt and apprehension, would turn capital, now awaiting an opportunity for investment, into the channels of trade and industry. It would alleviate the present troubled condition of those States, and, by inducing emigra-tion, aid in the settlement of fertile re-gions now uncultivated, and lead to an increased production of those staples which have added so greatly to the wealth of the nation and the commerce of the world. New fields of enterprise would be opened to our progressive people, and soon the devastations or war would be repaired, and all traces of our domestic differences effaced from the minds of our countrymen.

"In our efforts to preserve "the unity of government which constitutes us one people," by restoring the States to the having rescued our nation from perils of threatened disintegration, we resort to consolidation, and in the end, absolute despotism, as a remedy for the recurrence of similar troubles. The war having terminated, and with it all occasion for the exercise of powers of doubtful constitutionality, we should hasten to bring legislation within the boundaries prescribed by the Constitution, and to

THE TOUGHT AND THE PROPERTY OF modification of the constitutional powers be; in any particular, wrong, let it be corrected by an amendment in the way in which the Constitution designates. But let there be no change by usurpation, for it is the customary weapon by which free governments are destroyed." Washington spake these words to his countrymen, when, followed by the action of southern in them were woutened. The deportment and scholarship of many others who received no prizes were very meritorious. In order to give "honor to whom honor is hardihood to say that this horse-thief is to be received back into his old place in society at will, and because stealing words to his countrymen, when, followed by their levels and graphs. We wend to the best has been our best of the best has been our best of the best has been our best. ed by their love and gratitude, he voluntarily retired from the cares of public life. "To keep in all things within the pale of our constitutional powers, and cherish the Federal Union as the only rock of safety," were prescribed by Jefferson as rules of action to endear to his "countrymen the true principles of their Constitution, and promote a union of sentiment and action equally auspicious to their happiness and safety."
Jackson held that the action of the General Government should always be strictly confined to the sphere of its appropriate duties, and justly and forci-bly urged that our Government is not powers of the several States. In thus ernment strong, we make it weak. Its true strength consists in leaving individuals and States as much as possible to themselves; in making itself felt, not in its power, but in its beneficeme; not rule this nation. in its control, but in its protection; not in binding the States more closely to the center, but leaving each to move unob-structed in its proper constitutional orbit." These are the teachings of men whose deeds and services have made them illustrious, and who, long since withdrawn from the scenes of life, have left to their country the rich leg-acy of their example, their wisdom, and their patriotism. Drawing fresh inspiration from their lessons, let us emulate them in love of country and respect for the Constitution and the laws."

THE MESSAGE.

It is necessary to say something about the President's Message, but one needs some practice in what lawyers call 'talkapprehension that persons who are dis loyal will be clothed with the powers of nothing) to discharge this annual duty. We have read it unexpectantly-not anticipating any evidence of wisdom born of experience or of common sense awakened by the verdict of the people at the ballot-box.

Andrew Johnson will have credit for sending the weakest of all State papers into the halls of Congress. We read it carefully, looking for some evindence of brains; we re-read it, thinking that a President must have some brains; but two readings failed to develop the evidence. In common parlance, we prefer less water in our milk than Mr. Johnson affords in his Message. It is desperately thin, halting, weary, dull, flat, stale and unprofitable.

Mr. Johnson still moans over the unrepresentedness of the ten erring sisters in Congressional halls. He returns to his often reproaches of the obstinacy of House adjourned after the reading of a Congress which refuses to yield up its the Message. prerogative to Andrew Johnson who has suffered more than any man by the rebellion. His Message reminds us of the tailor's wife who, being given to obstinacy, persisted in saying "Scissors" to her ninth part of a lord of creation. It will be recollected that the tailor one day got tired of the repetition of the shop-board word by his unamiable wife, and dragged her to a convenient horsepond wherein he soused her. Coming up, she ejaculated the hated word "Scissors!" He immersed her again and prolonged her stay some-

This disingenousness runs through the entire portion of the Message relating to the condition of the country. Healludes to the admission of Tennessee as an excondition which they held prior to the rebellion, we should be cautious lest, country that Tennessee was admitted simply because she accepted the terms prescribed by Congress as precedent to restoration; and that every other Southern State would be admitted on the same terms. XXXIXth Congress--2d Session.

Congress assembled on Monday week. The attendence was unusually full. SENATE.-Mr. Sumner called up the act to regulate the elective franchise in the District of Columbia, which was laid over under the rules.

Mr. Sherman introduced a bill to prevent the illegal appointment of officers of the United States. The bill provides that no money shall be paid to a bill to prevent the removal of officers without the consent of the Senate, when such officers shall be found properly qualified; but that such officer shall hold his position until his successor shall be appointed and confirmed by the Senate.

Both bills were laid over until the Committees should be appointed. After the reading of the Message the Senate adjourned. House.-Mr. Elliott introduced, under a suspension of the rules, a bill to repeal the act empowering the President to pardon rebels before trial .-The bill passed 111 to 29.

Every "Democrat" voted against suspending the rules, to permit the introduction and passage of this bill.

Mr. Schenck, of Ohio, introduced a bill to fix the time for the regular meetings of Congress. The bill provides that the 40th Congress and its successors, shall meet on the 4th day of March, the day of its commencement, and on the first Monday in January next thereafter, and on the second Monday of November next preceeding the end of the term for which the Congress is elected. The Judiciary Committee was inof providing a mode of trial for all cases of impeachment before the Senate. A new bill to equalize bounties was introduced by Mr. Schenck. The

The House bill repealing the bill giving the President power to pardon rebels was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

A joint resolution to amend the Constitution so as to make the President ineligible for reelection was referred.

House .- A bill to curtail the appointagain and prolonged her stay somewhat. On letting her up she sputtered out "Scis-s-ors-s-s:" He soused her under again, holding her there still longer, and a little too long for her wind. On coming up she was unable to articulate, but held up her right hand and moved the fingers with the incisive motion of a pair of Scissors—thus vindicating her prerogative to have the semblance of the last word.

So, this subdued reproach by Mr. Johnson reminds us that he is bent upon sticking to his "Scissors." The Ing power of the President was called up by a motion to reconsider entered by Williams, of Pittsburg. He spoke an hour upon the motion. After being amended, the bill was made the special order for the next day. Adj. at 2P. M. The House did little but discuss the bill to provide for the meeting of Congress on the 4th of March following the election of Representatives, during Thursday.
