WAYSIDE DEEAM. BY BAYARD TATLOR.

- A warm and dinway awaethese Is stealing o'er my brain;
- fivesp through the loyal plain-I hear no more the pessant girls Singing amid the grain!
- Soft, allvery wings, a moment Beens resting on my brow; Again I hear the water,
- But its voice is deeper now. And the mooking bird and origin Are singing on the bough!
- The elm and linden branches Droop close and dark o'erhead, And the feaming forest-brooklet Leaps down its rocky bed; Be still, my heart, the seas are passed-
- The paths of home I tread! The showers of creamy blossoms Are on the linden spray,
- And down the clover me They heap the scented hay. And gled winds tost the forest leaves,
- 'All the bright summer day. Old playmates bid me welcome
- Amid our brother band Give me the old affection-The glowing clasp of hand-I worship no more the realms of old-Here is my Estherland!

A good story is told about a couple of iurch-members—one of them a descen nurch-members—one of them a deacon y the name of Bennet, and the other a rother Griffin. Brother Griffin was ad-Brother Griffin. Brother Griffin was addicted a little to the use of intoxicating drinks, and was the cause of solde trouble to the church. On one occasion Deacon Bennet was sent by the church to talk with brother Griffin in regard to the error of his ways, and, if possible, persuade him to reform. In going from his house to that of Brother Griffin's he was compelled to cross a tream of water over which there was stream of water, over which there was a row-boat ferry. In crossing the Deacon told the ferryman where he was going, and his business. When he arrived at Brother G.'s he found him in the hav-field at work with his men. He was very cordially received by Bro-ther G., who suspected his errand and invited him to a seat in the shade of a large tree.

"It is a very warm day, Deacon, very warm; wou't you take a little something?" said G.
Well, I don't care if I do take just a swallow," said the Deacon.

To make the story as short as possible, the bottle was brought into requisition pretty often, the Descon forgot his errand, and started for home toward the close of the afternoon, considerably "over the bay." When he arrived at the bank of the river, which was very steep, he had to call the ferryman, who steep, he had to call the ferryman, who was upon the opposite side, and wait for him to come over. By waiting the liquor had a pretty good chance to work, and when he finally started for the boat instead of going toward it, he rushed down the bank into the river. The ferryman plunged in and brought him out, and after the Deason was on dry land the ferryman said:

"Why, Deason, what is the matter?"

"Oh," whimpered the Deason, "I feel so for Brother Griffin I can't stand! After this if any one in that neighborhood got too much liquor it was said:

"Oh, he feels for Brother Griffin!"

AUCIDENTAL INSURANCE.—Near Mil. waukie, an agent of the Traveler's In.

waukle, an agent of the Traveler's Insurance Company entered the cars, and having issued tickets to several passengers, approached an elderly lady, who it afterwards proved; was denf.

"Madam. would you like to insure against accidents?" inquired the agent, at the same time exhibiting his tickets.

"I got my ticket down to Milwaukee," she said. "I am going to Oshkosh to visit my darter, who's murried up there, and has just got a baby."

The agent raised his voice a little.

"Would you like to insure your life against accidents?"

MRS. PARTINGTON ON THE ROMANS. "I never did like the Romans," said Mrs. Partington, when seeing the play of Coriolanus, since I mistook some Roman punch for an ice cream, and it got into my head. And I came pretty nigh exploding once in trying to light one of Isaac's Roman candles, thinking it was war. I must say they are a set of fickle-minded creatures; taking the gentleman in the red table cloth for a consul, and then going to throw him over the terrapin rock. I am very glad, though, they didn't doit, because I don't see how the play could get along with him, and it would nave disapointed so many—" never did like the Romans." said many—"

"Stop talkink," said a harsh voice behind her. Mrs. Partington locked round at the speaker, who scowled at her with the indignation of two shillings' worth of impaired enjoyment, and she, simply saying—
"You needn't be so bituminous about it," was silent.

A HAPPY REJOINDER. -At Oxford A HAPPY REJOINDER.—At Oxford, some twenty years ago, a tutor in one of the colleges limped in his walk. Stopping one day last summer at a railway station, he was accosted by a well-known politician, who recognized him, and asked if he was not the chaplain in the college at such a time, naming theyear, The doctor replied that he was.

"If was there," said his interrogator, "and knew you by your limp."

"Well," said the doctor, "it seems my limping made a deeper impression on you than my preaching."

"Ah, doctor," was the reply with ready wit, "it is the highest compliment we can pay a minister to say that he is known by his walk rather than by his conversation."

THE FARMER'S GARDEN.-Who the fabres of sold garden if not the farmer? He has plenty of land, team, and as much manure as he can spare. There is no class of people to whose families a garden is a greater convenicamer is a greater to a greater conveni-ence or more pressing necessity, than the farming class. Removed far from that access to a daily market which makes up for the want of a garden to town and dity residents, the farmer's household must do without fresh vege-tables and fruits unless they are home-produced. Ay the farmer should not produced. Ay, the farmer should not only have a garden, but no man should have a better one. CLEVER ANAGRAM.—It is said that Napoleon, when he was asked by Dr. O'Meara if he really thought he could have invaded Englend at the time he threatened to do so, replied in the fol-threatened to 00 to, repared in the 10thlowing anagram;

"Able was I ere I saw Elba."
Whether this is true or not, weshould like to see a more ingenious or extended anagram, which the reader will observe, reads the same backward or forward.

The following is one of Josh Biling's best estings:

ING HIS MONEY. Look out for big sfores and big rents; big notes and big rates of interest and no real takers at that—all of which is very bad as against W. R. Smith's Som's situation. Light expenses and no rents, new goods at break down prices, and the good old motto of small profits, good value and quick returns, flying to the brease. The fact is, the only true and certain rosed-to-fortune for the merchant is always to give his customers: as we do, the most he can for his money, and depend on large sales for his profits. CARPETS AND OIL CLOTHS at ruinous low rates. The cottage and palace can be replenished for a song now, by calling on the People's Friend. CROCKERY, WALL PAPER, and a thousand other articles can be found; and no one who tees them can help buying. We manufacture all the OLOTHING we sell. Error well dressed man buys his harners of William R. Smith's Sons. We also make to order. Our Cutter is master of his gart; he stands down the hall for no man who wields the shears for a livelihood; his fits cure the deformed.

We keep Pork, Flour and Salt, always as low or less than market rates.

It is more than over the duty of every man and woman to call here before buying, and look through the stock of tempting goods and bargains, as no one can imagine or form any idea how great a difference there is between the prices of goods bought for cash and prices of goods elsewhere boughtfor notes that are not paid promptly. The safest thing for all buyers who want the lowest notch in goods, is to call and get W. R. smith's Sons' prices, and take around in your nockets to compare. A great many stores will set the cold choulder after you visit the Old Corner where they work for their customers.

You cannot mistake the place, as it occupies the room of four stores, immediately on the Eric railway, and the rush is constantly golag on.

Call, if for nothing mere than to see how we spike the guns. Yours, truly.

W. R. SMITH'S SONS.

Addison. N. Y., Sept 5, 1866.
