About a year since a stone commemorating the virtues of Mr. Lincoln has been transmitted by the people of Rome to the President of the United States bearing the following inscription in Latin: "The citizens of Rome dedicate thisstone, taken from the tomb of Servius Tullius, to Abraham Lincoln, a President for the second time of the United States of America, by which the memory of either brave defender of liberty He said that this beautiful memorial had been allowed to remain in the cellar of the White House surrounded by rubbish. It requested the President to cause the stone to be sent to the House rubbish. It requested the President to of Representatives, that it may have a conspicuous place in the National Capitol; and if it cannot be found, directing the officers in charge of the public buildings to have search made for it, and have it placed in the old hell of the House of Representatives. The fact that such a stone has been sent was not known by a dozen members, and when the resolution had been adopted, and the day's session was over. Mr. Judd was overwhelmed with interrogatories. It appears that the stone arrived in Washington some ten months ago, and was sent by the State, Department, to which it had been consigned, to the White House. It lay in front of the Executive Mansion for several weeks, during which time it was relieved by servants of its boxing. It was then taken inside, subsequently carried into the cellar, and finally placed (for safe keeping, it is presumed) in one of the coal-bunkers adjoining the furnace-room. Its inscription was seen by a prying visitor, copied, and shown to Mr. Judd, who subsequently saw the stone. The resolution of Congress concerning it was presented to the President on Saturday morning, but the latest report says that it has not yet been The warmest friends of Mr. Johnson admit that the most charitable supposition places him in a very awkward position. There was an elopement that evening of one. The young man went unaccompanied. He thought everything couldn't be right when the oldcock was so anxious to get rid of the girl. The father looks upon this act as a very neat bit of strategy, for one who had never been on McClellan's staff.

Montgomery Blair is stumping Virginia in behalf of Democracy, and in a ate speech accused the Republicans of being the only party that ever existed in this country that did not at heart profess to act in deference to the Constitution. We beg leave to inform Mr Blair that the Republican party has done more to preserve the Constitution than all the other parties combined; that had it not been for Republican energy and wisdom he would not now have a Constitution to talk about.
