when I was moving in it?" [For The Agitator.] Sir 21

In Memoriam-ALLIE AND WELLIE They died while yet the spring of life, Smiled with the morning's rosy hue ;-

While yet the fair sweet-breathing flowers . Were gemmed with dainty drops of dew ;-

While yet their pure young hearts were glad,-Were warm with hopes, undamped by fears; Ere summer sun's too brightly shone, Or autumn's dropped too bitter tears;

Ere winter's "frost's and fitful blasts" Made carth too chill for their abode They gently sank to peaceful sleep . And wakened in the home of God!

Since then the years—slow silent years— Have paced their weary, weary round,-Have dropped their rains like pitying tears, And winds have sighed with sobbing sound

The sun has shined, mayhap, at times And woodd the flowers from funeral sod; Their breath is like our thoughts of those-Those dwellers in the home of God.

O fair sweet blossoms of the spring ! Yo never knew life's woe and sin! O, bliss for us, at last to sleep-Like them to gladly enter in! August 9, 1867.

THE RICHEST COURT SCENE OUT. The following amusing case was tried in Port Jervis. The People agt. James Allington. District-Attorney for People; Prisoner n Person. This was one of the most amusing rials ever witnessed by bench or jury in this county. The prisoner was indicted for an assault and battery upon a man by the name Dodder. It seems that a plank-road had just been laid in the town of Minisink, running through the lands of Dodder, and that Allington is the toll gatherer, and that the gate-

The cause was duly open by the District Attorney, when his Honor, the Judge, noticed the defendant sitting within the bar, with pencil in hand ready to take down evidence, without counsel.

'Have you no counsel, Mr. Alling-the present of the present of the made awful strides down the aisle, and the Court buried the ludge:

concluded to try the case myself."
"Very well Sir." The District-Attorney, after stating the case to the jury, called the complaint, Mr. Dodder, upon the stand, who testified as follows:
I know the defendant; he is a neigh bor of mine. I was driving his cows off my land when he came out upon the road and stoned me. He sent as many as a dozen at me, and the last one struck me upon the back of the neck. 'It hurt me considerably: not very badly, how hed per cent. profits to the seller, to PAYING ever, as the rim of my hat hung down twenty five per cont. cash on delivery of the and it and the cont-collar prevented goods. I shall offer my stock of goods at fair "You can examine him now Mr "You can examine him now, Mr. Allington," said the District-Attorney.

All eyes were now turned upon the defendant. There he sat, busily engaged in taking notes, a little short, red leaded Yankee, with his feet resting on the lower round of the chair, and his body bent forward at an angle of 45 degrees. At that remark he snapped his head back like a blade in a jack knife, his eyes twinkled, and in a shrill, loud voice he commended:

"Have you been on good terms with the defendant-I mean Mr. Dodder!' "Dodder hesitated. 'Come, Mr. Dodder, have we been on rood terms!

"I can't say," replied Dodder. "Well, recollect, Mr. Dodder, that Say yes or no," interposed his honor. "I can't say that we are on speaking erms," answered Dodder.

He has fulfilled many offices of "profit and trust," both in the town and county. In his business career, he has been connected in some way with nearly all of the citizens of his vicinity. It is a re-markable fact that he is highly esteemed and very much respected by all.
The first physician of any note, who settled in this town and continued to make it his home was Dexter Parkhurst. He was an upright, conscientious man, truly loved and respected by all who knew him. He came into town in 1836, and followed his profession till within a short time before his death, which occurred in May of '65. Ho seemed to possess that power of adapting himself to circumstances, to such an extent, that he was always welcome at a sick bed, as much for his kind and cheerful conversation, as for any medi-

DRUNKENNESS.-Nine hundred and ninety-nine street drunkards in every thousand, having individual vigor to stand the vital reactions needful to make them sober, can be restored to usefulness by a process as simple as it is efficient. This process is to control the food and table drinks. Make any man eat rightly at table, and avoid all bev erages before, at or after eating but iquor or pure soft water; make him orego the use of all condiments, of to bacco and drugs, and he can no more remain a liquor drunkard than he could become one under like conditions. Given vitality whereby to get well, the law curative is as efficient as the law preservative. No living man ever saw a drunken man made so by voluntary use of alcoholic liquors, who never ate flesh meat, nor spices, nor salt, nor ani-mal oil, nor drank tea nor coffee, nor Nor will such a man ever be seen, for the thing is pathologically impossible. To prevent drunkeiness, control the food and table beverages, condiments and drug medicaments of the sober. To cure it, do the same thing. Drunken ness begins at the domestic table and
