

Terrible Death of an Old Man from a Savage Bull.

A private letter from Huxford, Dodge county, has been handed us, says the Milwaukee Sentinel of the 27th ult., which relates an awful affair in a neighboring town. The letter says: Mr. John Wilson, a farmer living near the north line of the town of Lenoir, Dodge county, had a bull which for some time had been exhibiting remarkable signs of viciousness, and was looked upon by some of the neighbors as a dangerous animal. Mr. Wilson's father, an old man nearly eighty years of age, lived with him, and usually let down the bars of the pasture every forenoon so that the cattle could go down to the brook near by to drink. On Thursday evening last Mr. Wilson and his wife returned from Watertown, and were surprised to hear the old man relate how he had a fight with the bull while they were away, and how the bull struck him, giving him the finishing stroke, striking him between the eyes with a stone. Mr. Wilson warned the old man not to meddle with the dangerous bull, but it was unsafe for a man so old as he was to interfere with such an animal. But he said he would surely make him mind.

On the following day (Friday) the old man went out as usual to let the cattle out and to water them, and before going, he knelt down on the stoop of the house and prayed fervently. Nothing further was thought of him till Mr. Wilson next morning happened to go to the front door, heard a loud howling from the field, and on looking saw the bull with some large object on his horns, surrounded by the other cattle, and all in great commotion. He soon as the fright of the women permitted, intelligence was sent to Mr. Wilson, who was working about half a mile off, and on going to the field in company with some of his neighbors, they found the old man perfectly dead, every vestige of his clothing gone, and his hands and wrists bound to the bottom of the legs of his pantaloons, and a heavy leather belt which he usually wore around his waist. He was in an awfully mangled condition, the bottom of ground of about a quarter of an acre, showing by its torn up state, as did also the cloth of blood lying here and there, that the struggle had been a desperate one, and that he had probably never known the meaning of fear, but lately he had become a little timid.

Gov SWANN'S REBEL MILITIA.—The correspondent of the Times, in a dispatch of Tuesday, says: Gov. Swann's recent purchase of the batteries of Napoleon guns for the use of the Baltimore militia battery companies, the officers of which are ex-rebels, has occasioned great comment in political circles here, and the opinions expressed regarding the matter are, of course, influenced by political predilections. There is no doubt, however, that the Maryland militia, mainly composed as it is of ex-rebel soldiers, would willingly carry out the programme, which has been ordered for the militia, in the possession of the capital at the ensuing session of Congress. It does not matter whether the programme originated in the fears of Radical Republicans, or in the minds of the officers of the organization, it is the absorbing topic of conversation on the streets of Baltimore, and yesterday during the middle of the Third Maryland Zouaves, a regiment numbering five hundred and fifty men, similar remarks were made to your correspondent, and the subject was discussed in Baltimore on the occasion. It is certain, therefore, that the troops are willing to act, and it is only necessary to send them and they should be called on from Washington.

Another correspondent says that it is learned from official sources that Gov. Swann made application to the War Department for artillery equivalent to the amount in value of the arms that he had applied for, and that Mr. Stanton said the request should be granted. He retired from office before the thing was consummated, and when the subject was renewed to the Governor Swann's application was refused on the ground, it is said, that the law does not authorize the kind of substitution of arms. This is a very curious report, and it is not explained in the report that General Grant had refused arms to the State of Maryland.

A SINGULAR CASE OF HANGING.—Mrs. Betsy P. Eastman, of Salisbury, N. H., died in that town a few days ago, her one hundred and fifth year. She was married to the deceased person in the State. An incident connected with her life is worthy of mention. Soon after the execution of Mrs. Surratt in Washington, she was accidentally mentioned that fact in Mrs. Eastman's presence, when she immediately exclaimed, with solemn emphasis: "I was the means of a man being hanged once." She referred to the execution of Ruth Blay, which occurred at Portsmouth, N. H., December 30, 1708. It was stated that this woman was a school-teacher of Mrs. Eastman when the latter was about six years of age. One day, through illness, Ruth Blay was absent, and the school was closed. Mrs. Eastman said she found a log under the school room floor, and got underneath the building, where she discovered a bundle wrapped in white cloth, in which there was a dead infant. The corpse proved to be the child of her teacher, who was arrested for murder, and the woman was hanged. A review came for her on the day of her execution, but Sheriff Parker wanted a warm dinner, and swung her off a few minutes before the appointed time. A review came afterward seemed to prove that Ruth Blay's child was still-born, and that she was not a murderer.

Dr. P. Reynolds, of Chicago, met with a strange adventure on Tuesday night last. He was summoned to attend two patients, and was requested to take his surgical instrument with him. He entered the carriage which was in waiting at his door, and was driven by a very circuitous route until it finally stopped before a small, dark, one-story building, and was conducted through a dark alley into a house, and up stairs. Here he found two men suffering from flesh wounds inflicted by means of a dermal-rick a large stone to be put in its place on one of the apartments, when the injuries were received; but while he was probing the wounds, one inadvertently remarked to the other, "John, you sent that in pretty fat." The matter having been thus broached, the doctor was informed that the patients had been friends, but from an unfortunate misunderstanding had been led into a duel. In going down stairs, after dressing their wounds, a young lady suddenly entered her apartment, and she, also, and impetuously exclaimed: "Oh doctor, they are not going to die, are they? Oh, it was all my fault! I alone am to blame!" He collected her fear, and was driven back home by the same circuitous route. The names of the patients are unknown.

DEATH OF MR. JOHN CURNS.—We regret to learn that Mr. John Curns of Wayne twp, Clinton county, who was struck on the head by a dermal-rick, met with an accident while on his way to his home on Wednesday last. Mr. Curns, in connection with other workmen was engaged in raising a means of dermal-rick a large stone to be put in its place on one of the apartments, when the striking Mr. Curns was struck on the head by the stone being falling from the hands of the men who were engaged in the work. His brains were scattered all over the place, and he was killed instantly. His brains were scattered all over the place, and he was killed instantly. His brains were scattered all over the place, and he was killed instantly.

The Agitator.

WELLSBORO, PENN. WEDNESDAY, OCT. 30, 1867.

Iowa elects the Republican ticket by 25,724 majority—a gain of 10,000 majority over the last election for Governor. The Republican majority in Ohio is stated at 3,258. It was the closest contested election ever held in that State. The Democratic majority in Montana Territory is 1,108. Dakota goes Republican, as also Colorado. Alabama returns a majority of 82,000 for a Convention.

The official vote of the State is now in and we know, at last, how the account stands. Last week we gave Sharnwood's majority at 1200; but this was an error in copying the report at Harrisburg. His majority is 922—less than 1000, in a poll of over 600,000 votes. The fall-off from last year is 62,000, of which the Republicans lose 40,443 and the Democracy 22,217. So, it will be seen, there is no gain to either party on vote, but a loss to both. Probably not ten men have changed their politics on either side, in a year.

THE LATEST PRODIGY. Of giants and giantesses, fat boys and adipose men, lean Edsons and Tom Thumbs, legless and armless men, two-headed calves, precocious mathematicians and musicians, the world has never been, and doubtless will never be, utterly bereft. Exceptions to nature's laws will endure while the laws endure. The only injunction we have to prevent, is—don't run mad over any freak of nature; for there are ten chances against one that the very next mail will bear news of the discovery of a later and greater prodigy than the last.

Our weakness is sympathy for the under dog in the fight. The war of ethnologists upon poor old Hain was not our war. We never voted a man nor a dollar to carry it on. He has had the credit of peopling Africa for many years. Thanks to Mr. William Patton, that great responsibility is lifted from the poor Noahian's shoulders. Happy Hain! Long abused, kicked and cursed by a drunken father, and "pudled" by garrulous Nott & Gliddon,—at last you are righted, vindicated, regenerated and disenthralled! While others made you black as Ebo, Patton, by one dabble of his genius, washes you as white as wool.

With pride we admit that we know Mr. Patton. We have known him for seven years, and his blindness has never suspected him of worse than fondness for peace, or better than correct deportment and good-nature. What veil shrouded his future from our unassisted vision is beyond our ken. He blazes into this twilight age in a lecture upon the "Origin, status, and Destiny of the Negro," a synopsis of which appears in the Philadelphia Daily News, all of which we have read, much to the quickening of digestion, albeit with a growing wonder what the entire lecture would do for a dyspeptic if the synopsis could do so much. Now he upsets a philosopher, and now he demolishes the facts of science, as a mischievous boy upsets a house of blocks, or slings a stone through a window-pane. The dark passages in Genesis gush into clear sunshine at his approach. We know now that where it says that "God bath made of one blood all nations of men," it does not apply to aggregated man, but to the white man only. Thank you, Mr. Patton. We supposed, until now, that it meant what it so plainly says; and it means what it does not say. Delightful commentator! Shall we have the slight remainder of the Bible expounded by the inspired "Towardian"? There are several other asseverations, touching false teachers, and stones of stumbling, and other such as say in their hearts—"There is no God!" which need his lucid touch to make the sum-mersault of meaning.

And so Blumenbach lived, and thought, and tested, and wrote, in vain! Has Mr. Patton no magnanimity, no bowels of compassion? Is there not room enough in the world of science for both Patton and Blumenbach? If not, then give us an eternity of Blumenbach, and just as few of his Siva, incarnate in Patton, as may be agreeable to the Fates.

But we must hasten, for five columns would not review "Patton on the Negro" in detail. We shall skip much of course. The negro, says Mr. Patton, can learn to do a pretty good stump speech, or preach a pretty good sermon, but he cannot attain eminence in mathematics which is the true test of mind." Therefore, we suppose, the negro is not a man, according to Mr. Patton. To what we might return with a force he will feel, that Mr. Patton can neither make a tolerably good speech nor preach a pretty good sermon; therefore, he has less capacity than many negroes. That is logic, is it not? But when did probability in mathematics become "the true test of mind," Mr. P? We believe the true test of mind to be highest reason; that mathematics do not pertain to the highest mental powers. At all events, Babbage invented a machine which is capable of more in mathematics than any single mind; and no machine has yet been invented to supersede reason. Much as we dislike to disagree with Patton, we still believe that mathematics do not pertain to the highest reasoning powers. Our philosopher tries to prove that
