The peach is a beautiful thing, I know,-Sweet is its pulp and rosy its glow; They are pleasant when fresh, and nice to dry, But peaches will ne'er make a pumpkin pic! Pomologists give their greatest care

To make more inscious the luscious pear; It's all very well 'twixt me and you, But the pears don't last, and the pumpkins do. Apples are good, when ripe and sound,-No better fruit e'er fell to the ground; But if pumpkins had grown on the tree of life,

Wo shouldn't have follen through Adam's wife. This is the end of the Pumpkin Song-Sing it loudly, and sing it strong: And if on a bit of praise you're bent, Call it "some pumpkina"-I'll be content.

A THRILLING INCIDENT.-The first settlers of Maine found, besides its red faced owners, other and abundant sources of annoyance and danger. The majestic forests, which then waved where now is heard the hum of business, and where a thousand villages stand, were the homes of innumerable wild and savage animals.

Often at night was the farmer's family aroused from sleep by the noise without, which told that bruin was storming the sheep pen or the pig sty, or was laying violent paws on some unlucky calf-and often, on a cold wintry evening, did they roll a large log against the door, and with beating hearts draw closer around the fire as the dismal howl of the wolf echoed through the woods.

The wolf was the most feroclous, blood-thirsty, but cowardly of all, rarely attacking man, unless driven by severe hunger and seeking his victim with the utmost pertinacity. The incident which I am about to relate, occurred in the early history of Biddeford.

A man who then lived on the farm occupied by Mr. H-, was one autumn engaged in felling trees, at some distance from his house. His little son eight years old, was in the habit, while his mother was busy with household cares, of running out into the fields and woods around the house, and often going where the father was at work. One day, after the frost had robbed the trees of their foliage, the father left his work pooner than usual, and started for home. Just by the edge of the forest he saw a very curious pile of leaves. Without ces, while in an old English watch there are stopping to think what had made it, he more than 700 parts. How they run under the cautiously removed the leaves, when what this own his astonishment to find his following letter:

off darling son lying there fast as leep!

FENN. RAILROAD COMPANY. Twas but the work of a moment to take up the little sleeper, put in his place a small log, carefully replace the leaves, and conceal himself among the nearest bushes, there to watch the result. After waiting a short time he heard a wolf's distant howl, quickly followed by another and another, fill the woods geemed alive with the fearful sounds. The howls came nearer, and in a few minutes a large, gaunt, savage looking wolf leaped into the opening closely followed by the whole pack. The leader sprang directly upon the pile of leaves and scattered them in every direction. Soon as he saw the deception, his look of fierceness and confidence changed to that of the most abject fear. He skrank back, cowered to the ground and hissively awaited his fate; for the rest enraged at the supposed cheat fell upon him, tore him to pieces, and deyoured him on the spot.

VAMPIRE - Vanipires, so called, are by no means peculiar to Brazil, but the veritable creature insimuated, itself into the company of Americans which arrived in that country a few days ago The writer says:
A party of Americans went up the Amazon a few days ago, and one of them was bled so badly by a vampire as to awake, in a state of exhaustion, with a face like a corpse; the foot of this hammock and the floor beneath it were saturated with blood, the flow of which was staunched with great difficulty. It is the difficulty of staunching the blood which makes the vampire so dreaded, the quantity which the creature requires to satisfy his appetite be ing comparatively trifling. Some persons seem to be especially liable to their affacks, while others can steep in a room infested with them nightly with. impunity. A gentleman living near Para, and whose house stands on the bank of an igarape, tells me that his room is seldom without one or more vampires in it after dark, and they have never molested him, although they have bled an unlucky goat in a shed beneath his window until the creature was unable to stand, and was Ground Ground shot as an act of mercy. A young English lady who was visiting at this house was bitten on the first night of her arrival, and in spite of the precautions used, was bitten a few days afterwards, bleeding from a wound on the under side of the toe until much weakened. These animals only make their attacks ln darkness, and a light kept burning in the sleeping-room is an effectual safeguard. A physician, long resident here, tells me that although poisonous reptiles are somewhat plenty in the province, the serious accidents from this cause scarcely amount to half a dozen annually in a population of 30,000. But enough of reptiles for the present.

"BEAUTIFUL RIVER."-Sabbath day is the beautiful river in the week of Time. The other days are troubled at renewalle, and vicinity, a general assortment of streams, whose angry waters are disupon them; but the pure river, Sabbath flows on to Eternal Rest, chanting the turbed by the countless crafts that float sublime music of the silent, throbbing spheres and timed by the pulsations of the Everlasting Life. Beautiful river Sabbath, glide on! Bear forth on thy boon the poor, tired spirit to the rest WOOD & WILLOW-WARE, which it seeks, and the weary, watch ing soul to endless rest.

A THRIFTY farmer, who "believes in making old things last in these times," says: "There is one thing that nearly everybody knows and hardly anybody attends to, that is, to sprinkle slacked lime on their roofs once a year, either in fall or spring. If the shingles are covered ever so thick with moss, the in fall or spring. If the shingles are covered ever so thick with moss, the lime soon clears it off, leaving the roof clean and white, and good for a dozen years longer. It ought to be put on pretty thick, and a rainy day is best for the work. Strong wood ashes will answer wer, almost as well to keep old roofs in repair, but they will not look as nice.—
