am I, now, in a strange house, among a lot of strangers every one of whom may be burglars, for all I know. These burg-lars from New York are heavy swells now a days, according to the papers, and do a large summer business in country hotels; and what would a deaf man know about their breaking into his room, until he found his moneybelt gone and his throat cut from ear to ear? So the only thing for it is to bar-

But we had hoped for an absence of all the petty strategy which mars, as we think, proceedings in Courts of lesser importance. It may be declared partisan favor on our part to say that the Senate will hear and determine the case without bias; but we so believe. Yet Mr. Johnson by his counsel, begins By resorting to delay, precisely as every men with a bad case does in the Courts. We name this "strategy," It is a move to gain time without a declared object. For as to time for preparation. who does not see that Mr. Johnson has been preparing his case for more than a year? Are we to suppose that idiocy s to be added to the already formidable list of his disabilities? We can suppose nothing less when we consider that he deliberately set aside a law of Congress, refusing obedience to its provisions on the ground that it was unconstitutional. Mr. Johnson knew, or ought to have known, that he is not made a judge of the law after it is filed in the State Department. When an 'act is presented to him for his approval or rejection, he may reject it, of course, and return it with his objections. But if Congress pass it over his veto, it becomes a law

Now this question may be very easily made plain; and in making it plain Mr. Johnson's crime will be so plain that no man of candor can apologize for him. | Suppose that the President approves an act of Congress and it becomes a law.
