RATTLESNAKES. - A correspondent story, or, rather, several snake stories. On the 19th, Mr. Pittsley killed two, the largest measuring 4 feet 51 inches. A week previous Mr. Charles Day followed a snake trail from the road to the woods and killed the snake. The next day another was killed near the same spot. In the afternoon a party set out to find the den. long known to be somewhere in that vicinity. About a quarter of a mile from the road they came to a ledge of rocks, and found the rattlesnake odor very strong. Filling a suspicious crevice with powder they fired the trail, when an immense development took place in the snake line. The boys went at it, and in a short time killed one hundred and thirty-seven rattlesnukes, the largest measuring 4 feet 8 inches, and the smallest 14 inches. Mr. H. E. Cooper killed a McPherson, Clerk H. R. Washington, D. C. large snake in his cellar. Mr. G. Lamb had a valuable mare bitten by a Copperhead, The bite proving fatal. Our correspondent rejoices that the copporheads are not very plenty as suakes, and hopes that the other sort may disappear after November. So mote it be.

Why How You Take —Pays a lady customer to one of their agents: "It's a charming little machine—that. Wilsox & Gibbs: it runs so easily, and so, quietly."—"Oh! yes, madem," says the double-thread agent, "but then it is only a single-thread; and a single-thread machine, you know, is of no value as a sewing-machine." "Why, how you take! Ally sister has one of them, and she does all her sewing on it, and would not exchange it for any other machine in the world," "That may be so; she probably never used any other: but though it may satisfy her, it would never suit you. Why, madam, those single-thread machines were tried long age, and rejected as totally worthless!"—See "Report" of the "Grand Trial" at Island Park, where the falsity of those charges were proved—by practical tests—and the facts was fully established, that the work done on the Wilcox & Gibbs is handsomer, stronger, loss liable to rip, and every way better than work done loss liable to rip, and every way better than work done on a lock-stitch machine.
