What hast thou for thy scattered seed, O sower of the plain?
Where are the many gathered sheaves.
Thy hope should bring again?
The only record of my work
Lies in the buried grain. O gonqueror of a thousand fields! In dinted armor dight,
What know the of purple amaranth Shall grown the brow of might?
Only he blossom of my life
Plung widely in the fight. What is the harvest of thy saints, O God, who dost abide? Where grow the garlands of thy chiefs In blood and sorrow dyed?

What have Thy pervants for their pains? THE COUNTRY STORE. The whole population of the neighborhood resort to it with regularity; all the loungers, all the idlers, all who have done their weary day's work, all the town-gads and go sips in trousers, as well as the who go for molasses in jugs, for nails, tobacco and raisins—loiter, about talk and listen in this most convienent place of public reception. convienent place of public reception.— And if the store and post-office chance to be combined, the flocking of the sovereigns, with wives and offspring, fairly puts one out at any attempt at description. Besides the sugar, tea, nalls codfish, soap, and brooms, there lie all the letters that are addressed per sonally to the men and women of the Truly, an item to be thought of. The him total of all their correspondence with their strayed-away cousins, neices, nephews, and children. Therefore at this little hive the awarming town collects. Therefore do they come bither, evening after evening, picking up walks of news and watching, like paid detectives the postmester's distribution of the tives the postmaster's distribution of the letters. Therefore do they bustle and bustle around the functionary's person when the mall bags is fetched in from the coach and proffer assistance in as-sorting the miscellaneous newspapers which he empties over the counter.-Offering advice, when it is needed and when it is not. Submitting comment, original and assorted—on all classes of topics, with such sly foot-notes as one niay not at first understand. Then a country store is a strangel squiet place, of an afternoon, whether is summer or winter; save when, perhaps some liftle girl patters in to exchange a skein of thread, the flies and the rural merchant have it entirely to themselves. If the place is in charge of a spruc-young clerk, in lieu of the master, he employs himself with brush and gittle the little cracked mirrors flies sur-cracked desk, sleepy knots over the

It is not less a realm of doziness, either in planting time, and through the sweaty spell of haying. In the former season the men are about the gardenand off over their farms, and a formight take a leisurely trot through the town street without attracting the ever of marter or hound. Perhaps an enter prising pediar, atop of a bright red wa gon, trundles up to the doorstep, and from his canopled box "passes the time of day" with the prompt clerk, askfor the latest news, and offers essence at the very lowest "figger" Or a stray cow comes tearing off the succullent grass like all near the door, perhapwith a bell strapped about her neck, and putting the lown more completely to sleep with its sommolent me odles.

This is the store in the country town, or the village. It sometimes stands. however, away by itself at the crossing of two roads with the proprietor's dwelof two roads with the proprietor's dwelling in close propinguity; its entire front protected from burgiars by an an elent swing-shutter, and barricaded with boxes and buckets; half-filled with beans and dried apples, oats, that are tilted on the broad shelf just under the window; I do not believe a lonelied when can be found in the whole range of spot can be found in the whole range of Puritan New England; a millpond in a faded December afternion is a place of resort by comparison—a hemlock thicket at sunset is noisy in contrast with its sepulchral desolateness.

But when farming does not drive and leisure is to be had in solid chunks by all who want it, the store is not alto gether so, bare of interest to the casua observer. Huddled as the talking pop ulation love to be found, their portrai at full-lengths, may then be readily ta-ken. The men and the boys, perched on barrels or the counters, either swing on barrels or the counters, either swing their is and gossip, or swing their feet and spit. If it is winter, they huddle up to the dull box-stove, and polish the long pipes with their hard palms as coolly as if they were salamanders.—

They are stowed in unseen corners, too—The young fellows in particular—where they work over colorless, but sometimes rank, jokes in half whispers, and salaker in nassl unison over their odd confidences about the girls. The odd confidences about the girls. The small boys drink for what falls, grining bashfully when the older ones laugh they are taking their early lessons faith fully and well.

Of winter evenings, the stove, crammed with seasoned sticks, roars like any menagerie lion. No January winds without can drown its growling sound. The loungers are gathered in a great open circle, each with a hand erected for screen. There it is the affairs of the nation are sifted: there each town sovereign closes with his dissenting neigh. ereign closes with his dissenting neighoor, and finds his own personal niche among those occupied by the loyal worthies. The minister's last sermon come: up for analysis at this rustic round-ta-ble; when the astonishing fac: is revealed that they are all not less pro-found theologians than marvellous mus-ters of State craft and civil policy. To the store flock the farmers, in earnest with their spring work, after seeds and manures and agricultural implements. Boys run thither on errands for their mothers, their elsters, and themselves. Thriffy housewives drive up before the door at an early forencom hour, in the summer time, and go in to make barter of eggs and butter, and stocking yarn, for cotton cloth, or call co, or new shoes, with proper "power of squeak in them." The girls flock with red blushes burning in their oheeks, to see if anything lies over for them in the mail, or to exchange a few words with the sleek-haired clerk, or to finger, for the twentieth time, the limited stock of bareges, Prints and muslin de laines which he ever stands ready to spread about the counter. You will see a whole caravan of old family cobs about the premises, some with bob-tails and some with switch, holding down their heads and drowsing away the hours us if they had cropped poppy heads instead of green clover for their morning's repast. And elderly females are visible, too, climbing friskly into and out of their open waons, the day's successful barter giving them the nerve required to keep them

As politicians, the men who gather statedly at the country store strain the limits of common comprehension. On city rostrums it is thought the political notorieties sometimes give a start to the public pulse: but at the store, the work personal, and striking and thorough, beyond example. They make it their grand point here to corner a man, after which operation, it is thought be is not which operation, it is thought be is not worth putting out much strength upon. It is held to be the coronal feature of argumentative skill and power to get an opponent "where he can't get away."

Important Facts. SINCE onlutter is now being used in thousands of families the following facts are important to be known.

First—Though it is the most powerful of all popular remedies, yet it is so compounded, as to be so to and harmless. It is of such a hature that it may be handled and used by children, and persons who are ignorant of Medicines.

Second—It is found that Salutifer will relieve severe pain in any part of the body sooner than tay other application.
Tainb-It is important that the bottle be well corked, if left open only a few minutes it loses FOURTH-This useful remedy can be obtained rom almost every dealer in medicines.

> AGENTS WANTED FOR OFFICIAL HISTORY

Results. By HON. ALEXANDER H. STEVENS. A Book for all Sections and all Parties.

This great work presents the only complete and impartial analysis of the fauses of the War yet published, and gives those interior lights and shadows of the great conflict only known to those high officers who watched the flood tide of the latest style and approved workmanship and with dispatch.

He keep constantly on hand both kinds of Marble and will be able to suit all who may favor him with their orders, on as reasonable terms as can be obtained in the country.

Stones discolored with rust and dirt cleaned revolution from its fountain springs, and which were so accessible to Mr. Stephens, from his position as second officer of the Confederacy.

To a public that has been surfeited with AP-PARENTLY SIMILAR PRODUCTIONS, we promise a change of fare, both agreeable and salntary, and an intellectual treat of the highest order. The great American war has AT LAST found a historian worthy of its importance, and at whose hands it will receive that moderate, candid and impartial treatment which truth and instice so urgently demand.
