THE AMERICAN STOVE. - As the farm and workshop are the foundation stones of human prosperity, so the kitchen and its appurtenances constitute the Alpha of housekeeping. The kitchen stove is an institution by itself. If good, you have smiles, well baked bread, brown buckwheat cakes, and deliciously broiled ateaks, as results; but if bad, or indifferent, you have a fretful cook and wretched cookery, and by consoquence trouble in the family. The writer hereof cannot speak of the nuisances of a bad stove experimentally; but he can testify that there are two grades of stoves above "good," and further. that the "best," in all human probability, is the and every two weeks thereafter. All are invited AMERICAN. Some weeks ago we had one put up
