We did not approach the city by passing over the cliff—a point celebrated by tourists as the place from which Damascus bursts upon the traveller subdenly, and in its full beauty, as he comes in from the west. The fact is we were too weary just then to care how Damascus Looked, and were only anxthe only hotel in the city descrying the name. So we kept the straightest, easiest, road t and lost that famous view —a loss which we ceased to regret when we got our first comprehensive, view of Damascus from the top of the lofty minaret of the great mosque—the true centre from which the city and its interior gardens and its exterior orchards are all best overlooked. And certainly no city in the word can present so peno city in the word can present so peculiar, I had almost said, so picturesque a prospect. Damascus iles in the middle of a smooth; leveli plath, seemingly nearly a circle of fairy-built houses, somewhat higher than is common in other oriental cities, and almost all having overhanging, siories, which are shored up rudely by timbers, terminating in the walls, fifteen or twenty feet above the ground. The streets are conabove the ground. The streets are considerably wider than those of Cairo; but at they are almost all covered or arched over with light roofs, they are not visible from above. The chief feature, always excepting the numerous domes and minarets, not so abundant as in Cairo, is the large court yards, full of orange, lemon, and citron rees, laden with fruit, and always, with a large fountain of water in the middle. These courts, paved with marble, are found, on visiting a half dozen private houses to be even more extensive and more attractive within doors than they look from above. But the eye not long rested on the houses or courts, although hun-dreds of women, dressed like sheeted ghosts, were visible in these inclosures, for the girdle of orchards (gardens they are commonly called) which encircles the city, begins to be too attractive, especially just now that every one of its myriad of approof trees is in full bloom. It seems to make a broad, violet-colored, plumy wall of flowery fragrance around the whole city. Outside of this, springs another large circle of chalky hills, inclosing the plain on three sides, leaving it open only towards the desert, which, though unseen, suggests its portentous presence by a vague horizon at reception of the poor, other rooms where learned Moslems receive their pupils and give instruction. There are three commanding minarets of the or-dinary style belonging to the mosque, from which glorious views of the city and plain are to be enjoyed. We went down from the principal one just be-Dr. Belton's Letter.

"My son," said the elder Spriggles to his junior, thinking to enlighten the boy on the propagation of the hen species. "My son do you know that chickens come out of eggs?" "Do they?" said Spriggles, jr., as he licked his plate; "I thought eggs chme out of chickens,"

A physician was called to a man in this town the other day, who on being asked if he hadn't taken something strange into his stomach, replied that he believed he had. "It must have been that glass of water. Haven't been so imprudent, doctor, for ten years."

When Washington's secretary excused himself for the lateness of his attendance, and laid the blame upon his watch, his master quickly said: "Then you must get another watch, or I an-

The American Cooking Stove.

A FTER twenty years experience in the manufacture of stoves, we became convinced, some six years since, that a vast amount of money was being expended by the people of this country, in buying cheap and worthless stoves, a large portion of which was wasted; and that true economy consisted in buying the best stoves that could be made, notwithstanding the price was higher. With this view we proceeded to construct the American Cooking Stove, and spared no pains or expense to make it the best and most perfect stove that could be made. And we have experimented with it, and carefully we have experimented with it, and carefully watched its operation for the last six years, and when an improvement suggested itself, we have at once adopted it, and we have several of these improvements secured by letters patent. In this manner we do not hesitate to say, we have brought it to a higher state of perfection than has heretofore been attained in cooking stoves. The recent improvements in this stove has added largely to its convenience and effective-ness. In all the varieties of stoves we manufacture, we study usefulness, durability, convenience and economy in operation, rather than cheapness in price, and in so doing we are satis-

fled we study the interest of those purchasing our stoves. SHEAR, PACKARD, & CO., Albany, N. Y.

ulating the collection and payment of Licenses which are payable at the Treasurer's Office on the 1st day of May in each and overy year, and by said act, all Licenses remaining unpaid on the first day of July, the Treasurer is required to sue and press to judgment and collection, as soon as practicable thereafter, and in default thereof, to be personally liable. Those liable to a Licenso are therefore requested to be prompt in, making their payments before that date, thereby avoiding any trouble to themselves and much perplexity to the Treasurer.

June 3, 1868. H. C. BAILEY, Treasurer.

Altogether, Damascus, with its plain, in which it is said that fifty villages may be counted, seems a soft verdaut, fruity region, shut in from the rest of "the world, perfect in itself, and like a jewel in a rough setting—an oasis with a mountain rim. We visited the great mosque. It used to be a difficult, and then only an expensive thing to do. Now a party by paying a single pound may have the privilege of entering in

The roof is rude and ugly; the walls, once beautifully covered with Mosaic, are now disfigured by staring white-wash. There are the usual marks of Moslem instruction, a few pulpits: a well of holy water; some raised inclosures where old men learned in the Koran, sit reading aloud to themselves. A few others are rolled in mats and lie sleeping soundly on the floor. They are devotees, who having vowed to spend a certain unbroken period of time in the holy place, must needs sleep there when weary nature gives out under their monotonous prayer. A great many children and a considerable number of ragboys are running through the mosque ged men, and a good many others of tairy appearances and respectable demeanor, are moving about or prostrat-ing themselves towards Mecca. Some with very careless levity, without attracting any attention from the rest, for one of the principal doors opens upon the chief bazaar, and the passage across is a kind of thoroughfare. In spite of all this there is in the vast dispite of all this there is in the vast di-mensions of this mosque an unmistaka-ble dignity. The great court in the court or south side of it, paved with marble, is a grand, open square, in which is a small pavilion, where used to be the library.
