I learned to hunger, strive and wait,
I learned you, love—on, happy fate!
So late, so late!
Now all my fields are turning brown, Bo, daring, kiss my cyclids down!,

Oh, blessed sleep i oh perfect rest! Thus pillowed on your faithful breast Nor life nor death is wholly drear, O, tender heart, since you are here, So dear, so dear ! Sweet love, my souls gufficient crown! Noir, darling, kiss my cyclids down!

Pond-Net Fishing. While I was staying in Manitowoo (a place of about five thousand inhabitants,) located in the northern part of Wisconsin, on the shore of Lake Michilage. I had heard and read much of as these nets, but had never seen one in operation; Wo accepted the proposal to be ready at four o'clock the next morning, gladly; and for the benefit of those who know as little of the business as I. did, I will relate what we

At 4:20, the boat was headed for the Lake, and the long, measured stroke of the strong fishermen sent it rapidly forward. The boat is headed South, and we meet the cool refreshing air of the Lake. The blue water foams on either side of the bow, and gurgles under the stern. The sun is not yet up, but presently a little something glitters in the water, and then we observe the downrobed pages of the morning as they unlock the gates of day. I was charmed with the beauty of the scene, and my thoughts arose with reverence to Him, who planned the whole of Nature without copy, and drew from its exhaustless store, all the myrind varieties with which our Earth is teen ing. In a few minutes we reached the nets. These-are constructed as follows: Poles from 25 to 40 feet in length, corresponding to the depth of water, are sharpened and driven down in the bottom, sufficiently to hold them firm, commencing where the water is about 6 feet deep, and setting one every 60 feet out into the Lake, until a depth of 25 feet or more is reached. Here poles are driven down to form the outline of a heart, 150 feet on each side, the large end toward the shore. Then, still further out more poles are driven, forming a circle about 25 feet in diameter. This is called the 'pot,' very appropriately, as I will show. The poles being all driven, nets are stretched on the poles first named from near the shore out to the heart, and from the Lake bottom two feet above water, also around the "heart." The "pot" is similar to an immense dip-net. Now, the principle involved is as follows: The fish are enough to MAKE A SUMMER in feeding along the shore, say at a depth of ten feet. They meet an obstruction, and turn towards deep water to go around it, an action which instinct, always prompts them to follow being a large opening which gradually grows smaller, they are unconsciously guided into the heart, to escape from which they must go towards the shore through a small opening, which they are not likely to do. The small end of the heart ends in a sort of tunnel lending into the pot, the mouth of which is some 8x20 feet, and the small end 2x6. They might escape by going into the little end of the tunnel, but they don't know enough. Morning brings the fishermen with their boat, capable of carrying twenty barrels of fish. They close the mouth of the tunnel, then commence to haul up one side of the net, which constantly contracts the space occupied by the fish, until finally they are brought to the surface. One of the men takes a little scoop net, not as large as a bushel basket, with a very profitable. A ROMANCE OF LIFE.—The Fairfield Iowa, Ledger, contains a romance which we condeuse: Years ago a Pennsylvania farmer loved a charming young girl from his own village. Time passed on. Farmer occasionally got tight, or in other words, started a brickyard in his hat. Wife objected; farmer became angry, stabbed his wire with a butcher knife. Wife fell swooning to the floor. Farmer, leaves precipitately for the West. Wife recovers. After five years, marries again. Husband dies in a year. She leaves for the West. Arrives at Fairview. Stops at a boarding-house; meets her former bushand. meets her former husband; years have passed; she does not recognize him, and he knows her not. He loves her, proposes. She accepts, they marry.—Not twenty-four hours after the ceremony wife disrobes; an ugly scar is visible; husband sees this scar-is ut-terly amazed. Truth dawns upon them -it is the long-lost husband, once an assassin, now a sober, wealthy mer-chant of Fairview. Everything is love-ly, and 'all's well that ends well.'

to the wriggling mess, taking up now two, now five, or even more, and throws them into the bottom of the boat. It took about ten minutes to dip up five barrels. They were mostly white fish, with their large bodies and small heads; but here and there could be seen the trout, with his sleek, speck-led sides and shapely form. We started for home with a load worth at least $40. Individually we had a new experience, and when we returned, had a good appetite for breakfast, which was appeased half an hour later on the best piece of white fish we ever tasted. A

'In England no man thinks of blacking his own boots,' said a haughty Briton once to Mr. Lincoln, whom he found polishing his calf-skin gaiters. 'Whose boots does he black?' quietly responded Abe, as he spat on the brush.

'Pa,' said Charlie to his paternal ancestor, bolding a Sunday school picture book. 'What's that?' 'That, my son, is Jacob wrestling with the angel.'—
'And which licked?' inquired the young hopeful.

At a public sale of books, 'Drew's Essay on Souls' was knocked down to a shoemaker, to the great amusement of the crowded room, asked the aucman with—"I am poor, monsieur, but I am religious. I want but one of the saving virtues; I have Faith; I have Hope; it remains with you to give me Charity."

The American Cooking Stove. FTER twenty years experience in the man-A ufacture of stoves, we became convinced. some six years since, that a vast amount of money was being expended by the people of this country, in buying cheap and worthless stoves, a large portion of which was wasted; and that true economy consisted in buying the best stoves that could be made, notwithstanding the price was higher. With this view we proceeded to construct the American Cooking Stove, and spared no pains or expense to make it the best and most perfect stove that could be made. And we have experimented with it, and carefully watched its operation for the last six years, and when an improvement suggested itself, we have at once adopted it, and we have several of these improvements secured by letters patent. In this manner we do not hesitate to say, we have brought it to a higher state of perfection than has heretofore been attnined in cooking stoves. The recent improvements in this stove has added largely to its convenience and effectiveness. In all the varieties of stoves we manufacture, we study usofulness, durability, convenience and economy in operation, rather than cheapness in price, and in so doing we are satisfied we study the interest of those purchasing our stoves.
