You pump, sills! in vain,
For no one ever acknowledged yet,
He lived in Saandal Line!

It is a fearful peighborhood, So regard reighborhood,
So regard and so ely;
Although the tenants oftentimes
Include the rich and high;
I'm told they re even cannibals,
And when they dine or sup
By yay of change they'll turn about,

The inucliarists; the youthful, sir;
The benuitful and rare;
They grind up character and all,
And call it wholesome fare;
And should the helpless victim wince,
They heed not orles of pain;

Lord L-was phlegmatic and foggy, by no means a dayant, though an intense admirer of Lady L who was talented. He possessed none of the repellant discrimination of his lady, and would per-fer the society of some clever represen-tative of Billingsgate to that of a minister of the Church of England. But; as we have said, he believed implicity in Lady L——, and anything calculated to annoy that most excellent lady, must be removed at any cost. Of course, after consuming the night, and three or four hours of the morning, in the enjoyment of patrician pleasures, it was absolutely necessary to Lady L—whose brilliant talents were perpetually on the stretch during those intoxicating Blood Purifiers

But scarcely had Lady Little resigned herself fuxuriously to the arms of Morpheus, when she was auddenly recalled to the vulgar realities of a practical existence by the everlasting thumping of the father of eight children in the rear.
She gave Lord L—— a sharp punch in the ribs, which aroused him in an instant to that astonishing state of selfconsciousness, which led him to inquire in a somewhat testy, though oblivious
