Over and over again. We cannot measure the need. Of even the tiniest flower, Nor check the flow of the golden sands That run through a single hour. But the morning dews must fall: And the sun in the summer rain Must do their part and perform it all Over and over again.

Over and over again
The brook in the meadow flows, And over and over again
The ponderous mill-wheel goes.
Once doing will not suffice, Though doing be not in vain. And a blessing failing us once or twice, May come if we try again.

The path that has once been tred Is never so rough to the feet; And the lesson we have learned Is never so hard to repeat. Though sorrowful tears may fall, And the heart to its depth be driven With storm and tempest, we need them all To render us meet for Heaven. ,

WHO WAS THE BURGLAR. BY MAX KLEIN.

In the year 18—I lived in a quiet lit-tle village of M—, not quite fifty miles from Chicago, and was, there engaged in a grocery and confectione y store. How I came to go to this place from my native town in the souther part of New Hampshire is more than I or anythody else can tell.

But I left home as soon as I was of uge, and being rather giddy, and, as they call it now a days, fast, I wanted to get away from the eyes of my par ents: and I thought that if I could ge once into the world and out of my native town, I would "set rich," and come home and show the old folks and the neighbors, that Robert Sanford was somebody after all. Fortune in some way or other brought me to this place in the fall of the year. I at once got a situation as a clerk in a gr cery and confectionery store at very reasonable wages; and in the course of the next two years having been very economi cal with my money, I was admitted as an equal partner in the business; and if paying first rate, I managed to get enough together to purchase the other interest in the concern, and was the sole proprietor.

Well, about that time I attended a private party and there met and was introduced to a beautiful and accomplished young lady by the name of Mary Somers. Our slight acquaintance ripened into intimacy, and in the course of the summer we were married. Her parents were well off in worldly things, and at once set us up in a neat cottage on the bounds of the village, and my wife insisted that my only sister should come and live with us. | She came just as we had got comfortably settled, and we were of course very happy to see her, I not having seen her in six years. Every thing seemed to pass off pleasantly for about two months, when one morning I went as usual to the store, and on my arrival there discovered that my wallet was not in my pocket. I naturally supposed that I had dropped it at the house; and needing the contents that forenoon to pay for produce, I directly sent my errand boy after it. My wife sent mea note saying that it was not to be found in the house anywhere.

I then went myself, but with the same result. It was not to be found between the garret and the cellar. Here was a mystery. I knew that I had not lost it on my way down, and I came to the conclusion that it must have been taken from my pocket while I was asleep. But who could have taken it? There were none in the house but my wife and sister, the house keeper and my errand boy.

The housekeeper had lived with my father-in-law nearly fifteen years, and was known to be strictly honest. The boy had been with me in the store over a year, and had in the course of that time had many chances to take ten times the amount that was in the wallet, but had never touched a cent. Of course I could not suspect my wife and sister. But who was the thief? The next morning my wife missed her gold watch. This was too much.— We had fastened the door to our chamber, and the only means of access was a door leading into my sister's chamber,; but if they did, they did it without waking any of us. Matters thus progressed in this man-ner for three nights more, the first night my watch was taken, and the second my gold pencil; and the third my wife's jewel case from a trunk at the head of the bed under the table. I then accused the boy boldly of robbing the house, at which he was so taken back and indiguant that he left the store immediately, went to the house and packed his satchel and started for the depot; but I had an officer there and arrested him just as he was stepping on board the train. At being thus accused, arrested and searched, the boy was so astonished and ashamed that he cried, and begged of me to let him go home. But I thought this only a ruse to get away on, and I answered him that I would let him go bome when he came down with the watches, jewelry and money, at which the boy broke out in sobs, and protested his innocence. But I could not see it, and had him taken to the village lock-up. He was examined that after-noon, and the evidence was so strong

The next night I resolved to watch. I accordingly provided myself with a revolver, and retired, not to sleep, but About midnight I heard a slight noise to keep awake and watch. in my sister's room, and in a short time her door slowly opened, and I clutched my cocked revolver nervously for the burglar was coming. When the door was swung open, my own sister, in her night clothes sound asleep with a lamp in her band, came into the room with cat-like step. She came straight to the head of our bed and took a fancy china match box off the stand and went back. with the same noiseless step. I arose as quietly as I could and followed her into her room, and saw her go at once to her trunk and open it, and then open a false top which she let down from the cover; and looking over her shoulder I saw my wallet, the two watches, the jewel case, my gold pencil and several other things that had been missed. I went back and awoke my wife who came in, and then we a woke the somnambulist with the open trunk before her. The mystery was explained and the real robber caught. At daylight I was on the road to the county jail with the constable gains the constable going as fast as horse-flesh could carry us to release Harry Johnson, the boy! I had imprisoned on a mere Wellsboro, Nov. 4, 1808. FOUTZ'S Horse and Cattle Powders.

This preparation, long and favorably known, will thoroughly 1e-invigorate boxen down and low-spirited horses, by strengthening and cleansing the stomach and intestines.

It is a sure preventive of all diseases incident to this animal, such as LUNG FEVER, HEAVES, COUGHS, DISTEMPER, FEVERS, FOUN DER, LOSS OF APPETITE AND VITAL ENERGY, &c. Its use improves the wind, increases the appetitedity of the property of th

To keepers of Cows this preparation is hivaluable. It is a sure pre ventive against Rinderpest, Hollow Horn, etc. It has been proven by actual experiment to increase the quantity of milk and cream twenty per cent. and make the butter firm and sweet. In fattening cattle, it gives them an appetite, loosens their hide, and makes them thrive much faster.

In all diseases of Swine, such as Coughs, Ulcers in the Lungs, Liver, &c., this article acts as a specific. By putting from one-half a paper to a paper in a barrel of swill the above diseases will be cradicated or entirely prevented. If given in time, a certain preventive and cure for the Hog Cholera. noon, and the evidence was so strong against him, on his attempting to leave stown so suddenly after the robberies that the justice supposed he was the guifty one, and said it must go up to the county court which set in three weeks, and if nobody gave bail he must go to jail to await a trial. He was sent to the jail at the county seat, some six miles distant.

That night we supposed we were rid of the burglar, and slept soundly without fear of losing any more valuables. But what was our consternation in the morning to find my wife's finger rings gone! She had accidentally left them on the stand the night before, but they were not to be found.

Now who is the burglar?
