We are fully justified in judging of the unknown by the known; and when we suppose we have discovered one point in the unknown, and are one step ahead, we rious substances as modified throughout may, as surveyors sometimes do retrace the system and for expelling those gases | that step and verify the correctness of that have been generated in the body, that new point.

Wellsboro, Pa., March 29, 1869. A Touching Story.

The following effective narrative purports to have been given by a father to his son, as a warning derived from his the organs and parts of the earth are own bitter experience of the sin of reimmensely gigantic, compared to the sisting a mother's love and counsel: What agony was on my mother's face when all that she had said and suffered within the 80th parallel, or near the no more till she reached her own door.

Now the only difference longs to forgive you.' between my theory and this seems to I would not answer. I heard her footsteps slowly retreating, and flung myself on the bed to pass a wretched and fearful night.

'Mother!' mother!' I shrieked; 'say only that you forgive me!'
She could not say it with her lips, but what we see in those small spots of light in the heavens, we know only intellectually, though we take our first intullectual departure from our animal cast her eyes upward. She moved her lips in prayer, and thus she died. I remained still kneeling beside that dear form till my gentle sister removed me-The joy of youth had left me forever. Boys who spurn a mother's control; who are ashamed to own they are young; who think it manly to resist her authority, or yield to her influence, beware! Lay not up for yourselves bitter memories for your future years.

THE CHRISTIAN GENTLEMAN. - A modern writer thus describes the Christian gentleman: He is above a mean thing. He can-not stoop to a mean fraud. He invades no secret in the keeping of another; he betrays no secrets confided to his own keeping. He never struts in borrowed plumage. He never takes selfish advantage of our mistakes. He uses no And I contend that thus we are justified in assuming that all the moving never stabs in the dark. He is a shamed in analogy, then, to animal breathing bodies we see are of analogous conformation and organization. We find in man's face and another behind his back. It is own atmosphere, but the gases that all organizations that we are able to his pages upon locks and keys, hedges, and bonds and securities, notice to trespassers, are none of them for him. He may be trusted himself out of sight, near the thinnest partition, anywhere. Hebuys for trillions of years this destructive no offices, he sells none, intrigues for and reconstructive journeying of the none. He would rather fail of rights than win them through dishonor. He tramples on no sensitive feeling. He insults no man. If he have rebuke for another he is straightforward, open, manly. He cannot descend to scurrility. In short, whatever he judges honorable he practices toward every man.

THE CHANGES ON THE EARTH'S SURFACE during the glacial period are strikingly illustrated by a boulder of a peculiar variety of granite, fifteen feet high and seventy feet in circumference, perched upon the top of the Hoosac Mountain, one of the highest peaks in Massachusetts. This boulder, it is conclusively proved, was clipped off the apex of another mountain at, Stanford, Vt., and transport by the ice to its pres ent position. The Stanford mountain is now a truncated cone, and the boulder is composed of the same kind of granite, which differs in every respect from the Hoosac rocks.
