BRITISH ALLIES.

Without any remarkable effort of nemory we can remember when hatred of Britain constituted the bulk of the Democratic party. "Your dad was a Federal!"-were the sharpest accusation one man could make against another. Sympathy with England, even when demanded by justice in making common cause with civilization, was taboaed in Democratic circles less than fifteen years ago.

We do not forget, nor do we intend the readers of this paper shall forget, that in the darkest hours of the war, certain leaders of that party besought Lord Lyons, the British Plening, to procure the interference of ed States and the rebels in arms. Having urged the South to revolt, these pothe field, and so counseled with the hereditary enemies of the republic. It is a part of history, in which Lord Lyons is a witness, that these Democratic leaders besought Britain to interfere no sympathy with the Government tisanship, and of course unfitted her for impartial mediation. In common with the friends of freedom everyfended by a Christian man or woman. England did not sympathize with the cause of the South; she only regarded a hoped-for result—the destruction of the Republic. Her aristocrats saw in rebellion a possible failure of the republic. Such an event promised tech-at, the fitting out of pirates to cruise against our merchant marine. This is the case stated. In the light of this explanation the present tone of the Democratic press is significant, as showing, that all through the war the Democratic leaders were in complete accord with the tory lords of Britain, and with the purpose of the South. It fully accounts for many things plain enough to some always, but difficult to illustrate. To-day, the Democratic leaders sympathize, not with the United ders sympathize, not with the United at evry important democratick vicktry ever States, and not with our ruined shipowners, but with England, and British
