

HOME MATTERS.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 23, 1869.

New Advertisements. In Bankruptcy—Zopher Teed. Dissolution—B. Dimon & Co. Administrator's Notice—Wm. M. Newell. Engine and Boiler for Sale—John R. Dorton.

FOR SALE—A first-class Fanning Mill entirely new. Inquire at The Agricultural Office.

STRAWBERRY FESTIVAL.—There will be a Strawberry Festival at Crow's Hill, Stony Fork, Tuesday evening, June 29th, for the benefit of the Methodist Church.

AT COST FOR CASH.—Geo. W. Foster, successor to J. H. Dimon & Co., Niles Valley, will sell Dry Goods, Groceries, Hardware, Boots & Shoes, etc., at New York prices, during the whole week.

We enclose the letter of Mr. C. A. Deane, from Colorado, in this number. It is, as ever, interesting, though rather un-Quakerish in its sentiments. We hope to hear from Mr. Deane often.

EAST CHARLESTON.—The Postmaster General has appointed John Kohler P. M., vice A. Whitney, Esq., resigned. Mr. Kohler will make an attentive officer and deserves the place, though it will not make him rich. Mr. Whitney has held the place about a dozen years with ability.

SALAD.—It is not always that the who can write a good poem can also grow superior onions. Beans can do both. The fault we find with him is that he sends his poems to the magazines and his onions to the Avon.—His office is rank 1 'tis smells to heaven!

FIRE!—Almost a serious fire occurred at the Ice Cream Saloon of M. Sears in this village, Saturday night, 19th inst. The Chandlery light to the floor, spilling the Kerosene broadcast. The flame spread rapidly, but was finally smothered without serious damage.

A BIG LAY.—To Master Frank Egan we are indebted for a hen's egg, measuring 4 inches in its smallest, and 8 inches in its largest circumference, and weighing four ounces. If anybody finds a bigger "hay" than that, Frank will try again.

LICENSES.—Licenses were refused at last term of Court in all neighborhoods where the people remonstrated in force. Wellborn is still without a license, therefore, though we do not see any evidence of sorrow because of it. The Bench deserves credit for its persistence in a conscientious construction of the law. They will never have cause to regret their action.

GOOD TEMPLARS.—The officers elect of New Hope Lodge, Mansfield, were installed by Lodge Deputy Elliott May 7, as follows: W. C. T. S. S. Gillett; V. T., Lydia Baker; S., Francis A. Kitch; Treas. Mary Gayford; F., Charles Kirtley; Marshal, D. A. Gayford; I. G., Belle Vincent; & G., Walter Cole.

PERSONAL.—GEO. THOMAS L. YOUNG, of Cincinnati, is on a visit to his brother, Hux Young, Esq., of this village. The General presents the aspect of a man between whom and life there is no disagreement. He is a very copy of Hugh, enlarged and revised. They are twins, but Hugh claims seniority by thirty minutes. Several rather funny mistakes in identity have occurred since the General's arrival; and but for his corporeal bigness it would puzzle an expert to decide which is one and which 'tother.

IMPROVEMENTS.—Messrs. Wright & Barry are about to erect two new buildings on the north side of Main-st., below Kimball's Grocery. This will cover their vacant lots on Main-st.

Foley's new shop is finished, and he is getting things to rights. This is the nearest front in town, and the inside finish is ahead of anything heretofore.

Mr. M. Sears has fitted up the store just vacated by Foley for an ice-cream and fancy confectionery saloon. Mr. Sears is an expert ice-cream maker, and no doubt the establishment will do a good business.

Among recent improvements are new foot-walks in various neighborhoods of this village. Many of the walks are dangerous, and were usually to receive injury therefrom, the borough would be liable. Let both parties endeavor to make better the walks.

Messrs. Jas. S. English and Thomas Conkey have bought lots on the extension of Lincoln-st., east of Walnut, and have begun to improve them. Mr. English has built a fine barn on one of his lots, and both parties contemplate other improvements. The street is to be graded down. There are some fine building lots on this street.

The dwelling on Water-st., have put a fine foot-walk from Queen-st. to Nicholas-st. Water Street is improving very handsomely.

A FOWL PROCEEDING.—We were not aware until our visit to Mansfield last Thursday, that there was a practical "Hebibi" in Tioga county. During our stay Prof. Allen proposed a visit to a "little establishment" of King Kingley. What that establishment was did not occur to us, until reaching it, piloted by the King himself, we were amazed to find a group of neat buildings and pretty yards, in which Bramas, Housings, and Black Spanish fowls, from chicks to full grown, were sporting themselves with apparent satisfaction. Entering first the dormitory, we saw that Mr. King's chickens roosted low. It was as clean and sweet as a kitchen well kept. From this to the poultry or under-cover feeding room, thence to the nesting room, where clean rows of nests with eggs in all delightful view. Thence to the room for those rasping creatures, "setting hens," and thence into the yards where the beauties take their exercise. The main building is 16x10, so warm as not to freeze in winter, and correspondingly cool in summer. The floors are earth, and clean swept every morning. The yards are just as neat as the nesting room.

We saw a cock and two pullets for which Mr. King paid $10. We saw 102 Bramas, and a dozen or two Housings, etc. Mr. King says it pays, and we believe him. It will also pay anybody to buy Mr. King's fowls. May he never want for eggs and Spring chickens.

GOSSIP.—History records several notable examples of personal vanity. Among them that of Cyrus of Persia, who, when the Macedonian proposed a division of Asia, replied: "The earth could not bear two sons, nor Asia two Kings." At the very moment the bulk of the continent was unknown to Cyrus, and governed by a greater authority than he.

There was the Roman tyrant, who defied his horse, and brought him offerings of gilded oats, who caused statues to be erected to his own honor in his lifetime; and who made beauteous of his caprices as offerings to his majesty.

There was one of the early British Kings, who (long fetters into the sea, and forbade its tides to flow landward.

There was Charles Twelfth, of Sweden, who ravaged Europe for glory and perpetual aggrandizement.

There were the three tailors, who memorialized the world, beginning—"We, the people of Great Britain," &c., &c.

Crossing the sea—there was the man who, one day met Mr. Swayne, of the Philadelphia Ledger, and said with unctuous: "Mr. Swayne, I have respect the Ledger!" "How?" replied Swayne; "at what about that?" "Come along with me," so they walked down to the Ledger office, where the clerk and editor of present, the clerk of type, and the buyer clerks seemed to take Mr. Swayne by surprise. "My friend," said he, "you see that there's no stoppage here; you are certainly mistaken."

The gentleman had stopped his paper. That was all. The Ledger went on. The man died.—Still the Ledger went on. The man has been dead many years. Still, the Ledger, to-day is the most widely circulated and most profitable paper in Philadelphia. There was Andrew Johnson, who rising from obscurity through minor offices to the Vice Presidency, suddenly forgot that the whole human race was not swallowed up in his identity. When he addresses the people his text is "Andrew Johnson," and the commentary is "Andrew Johnson, his public services and persecutions." When he writes, "Andrew Johnson" is his theme.

The moral of all which is: The delinquency or death of no man can balk and defeat the plan of creation. The best man living may drop out of the machinery and the world will not detect so much as a jar. There is an increasing tendency among men to overrate themselves.—They are apt to conclude that the world could not get on very well without them.

There is no greater mistake.

LAWRENCEVILLE LOCAL.—The Ladies of this village will hold a Festival Friday evening, June 25, at the Cornet Band to replace their instruments lost by fire. It is hoped that all pleasure lovers will turn out on that occasion and patronize the Festival.

The Good Templars are anticipating a good time July 2, by inviting the sister Lodges to appear en masse. Lawrenceville needs such a demonstration, containing as it does a good many temperance units.

Mrs. Mills and Wells, aided by Thornton, have embellished their premises with maple trees. Clark Shoson has blockaded the footwalks with huge bonfires, preparatory to the building of a stone hotel. If he does not command more soon we shall have to call on the Burgess to remove the obstructions.

The legal fraternity still remain in our midst, prospering. P. Ryan, Esq., is in the city, and the late Stewart Block, J. W. Adams is expected to return to the city. Mr. Horton is heard for "Miz." Some may think being corp more lucrative, yet we wish our legal friends success.

I want an introduction to "Sparhawk." To him to leave his card at 627 So. Sixth-st., Lawrenceville. Sleepy yards, Riv' VAN WINKLE.

Another Correspondent writes: Let contrivances stand just where they are for the past fifty years or more, and I can almost say without being disturbed, by way of improvement, one lot or other, done much for this place, but man has done less. Nature has given us a nice site for a large village; and beautiful shade trees, under which to build our cottages and be protected from the sun's rays of July. Good water-power can be obtained for manufacturing purposes. Some may say the water privileges for the above are not for the property of the place. A few thousand dollars will obviate all trouble arising from inundation by water.

If Real-Estate owners would sell their lands at figures that would encourage capitalists to locate here, in a very short time, though some Lawrenceville will never be flooded with water. Otherwise, if the people of Tioga county have fully forgotten the old trick, it might be done by Legislation.

Many thanks to Messrs. Horton, merchant and Leonard, for repairing the sidewalk on Main-st. Messrs. Leary and Wheeler have had their ice-cream saloon on Mechanic-st., and their creamery in addition.

W. Fish and lady from Saginaw, Mich., are visiting Mrs. Fish's father, Dr. Parkhurst. I understand she is to spend the summer here. Dr. Parkhurst has been repairing his house on State Street.

I notice many individuals are fixing up the graves of their departed friends. There is great need of a general improvement of the Cemetery. Let us not neglect the graves of our dead for it is the last tribute of respect we can show them.

There is considerable talk about the earthquake near here. The facts as I learn them, are as follows: On Monday, June 7, at about one o'clock Mr. Bradley Lindley was at work at the foot of the hill near his house just northwest of this place, in the edge of New York State, when an accident occurred in the cutting of rock. The period of about a minute and a half, the earth shook and trembled considerably. Horses in the field were very much frightened, as well as a number of persons who noticed the occurrence. What the phenomenon was we are unable to say. Therefore we call it an earth quake.

"SPARHAWK."

THE NORMAL COMMENCEMENT.—The 10th Graduating Class of the Mansfield Normal School must remember their Commencement Day as auspicious. It was beautiful, overcast and underfoot; and as for that matter the audience presented an unusual array of fair women and brave men.

By 10 A. M. the chapel was crowded. In waiting, and the observance of many ladies, we found Dr. Pratt, of the Corning Journal, and Maj. Thurston, of the Plainville Advertiser. Favored by the presence of these worthy knights of the quill, who gallantly drew the fire of a thousand visual batteries, we escaped observation and without scars. There was a little confusion of nomenclature on the part of Pratt and Thurston, but it was at last settled that the Doctor should lead the press-gang, supported by the major as first assistant, and The Advertiser as second assistant pencil sharpener. This was all very well in theory. In practice it proved a failure.

In waiting, and the observance of many ladies, we found Dr. Pratt, of the Corning Journal, and Maj. Thurston, of the Plainville Advertiser. Favored by the presence of these worthy knights of the quill, who gallantly drew the fire of a thousand visual batteries, we escaped observation and without scars. There was a little confusion of nomenclature on the part of Pratt and Thurston, but it was at last settled that the Doctor should lead the press-gang, supported by the major as first assistant, and The Advertiser as second assistant pencil sharpener. This was all very well in theory. In practice it proved a failure.

In waiting, and the observance of many ladies, we found Dr. Pratt, of the Corning Journal, and Maj. Thurston, of the Plainville Advertiser. Favored by the presence of these worthy knights of the quill, who gallantly drew the fire of a thousand visual batteries, we escaped observation and without scars. There was a little confusion of nomenclature on the part of Pratt and Thurston, but it was at last settled that the Doctor should lead the press-gang, supported by the major as first assistant, and The Advertiser as second assistant pencil sharpener. This was all very well in theory. In practice it proved a failure.

In waiting, and the observance of many ladies, we found Dr. Pratt, of the Corning Journal, and Maj. Thurston, of the Plainville Advertiser. Favored by the presence of these worthy knights of the quill, who gallantly drew the fire of a thousand visual batteries, we escaped observation and without scars. There was a little confusion of nomenclature on the part of Pratt and Thurston, but it was at last settled that the Doctor should lead the press-gang, supported by the major as first assistant, and The Advertiser as second assistant pencil sharpener. This was all very well in theory. In practice it proved a failure.

In waiting, and the observance of many ladies, we found Dr. Pratt, of the Corning Journal, and Maj. Thurston, of the Plainville Advertiser. Favored by the presence of these worthy knights of the quill, who gallantly drew the fire of a thousand visual batteries, we escaped observation and without scars. There was a little confusion of nomenclature on the part of Pratt and Thurston, but it was at last settled that the Doctor should lead the press-gang, supported by the major as first assistant, and The Advertiser as second assistant pencil sharpener. This was all very well in theory. In practice it proved a failure.

In waiting, and the observance of many ladies, we found Dr. Pratt, of the Corning Journal, and Maj. Thurston, of the Plainville Advertiser. Favored by the presence of these worthy knights of the quill, who gallantly drew the fire of a thousand visual batteries, we escaped observation and without scars. There was a little confusion of nomenclature on the part of Pratt and Thurston, but it was at last settled that the Doctor should lead the press-gang, supported by the major as first assistant, and The Advertiser as second assistant pencil sharpener. This was all very well in theory. In practice it proved a failure.

In waiting, and the observance of many ladies, we found Dr. Pratt, of the Corning Journal, and Maj. Thurston, of the Plainville Advertiser. Favored by the presence of these worthy knights of the quill, who gallantly drew the fire of a thousand visual batteries, we escaped observation and without scars. There was a little confusion of nomenclature on the part of Pratt and Thurston, but it was at last settled that the Doctor should lead the press-gang, supported by the major as first assistant, and The Advertiser as second assistant pencil sharpener. This was all very well in theory. In practice it proved a failure.

In waiting, and the observance of many ladies, we found Dr. Pratt, of the Corning Journal, and Maj. Thurston, of the Plainville Advertiser. Favored by the presence of these worthy knights of the quill, who gallantly drew the fire of a thousand visual batteries, we escaped observation and without scars. There was a little confusion of nomenclature on the part of Pratt and Thurston, but it was at last settled that the Doctor should lead the press-gang, supported by the major as first assistant, and The Advertiser as second assistant pencil sharpener. This was all very well in theory. In practice it proved a failure.

In waiting, and the observance of many ladies, we found Dr. Pratt, of the Corning Journal, and Maj. Thurston, of the Plainville Advertiser. Favored by the presence of these worthy knights of the quill, who gallantly drew the fire of a thousand visual batteries, we escaped observation and without scars. There was a little confusion of nomenclature on the part of Pratt and Thurston, but it was at last settled that the Doctor should lead the press-gang, supported by the major as first assistant, and The Advertiser as second assistant pencil sharpener. This was all very well in theory. In practice it proved a failure.

In waiting, and the observance of many ladies, we found Dr. Pratt, of the Corning Journal, and Maj. Thurston, of the Plainville Advertiser. Favored by the presence of these worthy knights of the quill, who gallantly drew the fire of a thousand visual batteries, we escaped observation and without scars. There was a little confusion of nomenclature on the part of Pratt and Thurston, but it was at last settled that the Doctor should lead the press-gang, supported by the major as first assistant, and The Advertiser as second assistant pencil sharpener. This was all very well in theory. In practice it proved a failure.

In waiting, and the observance of many ladies, we found Dr. Pratt, of the Corning Journal, and Maj. Thurston, of the Plainville Advertiser. Favored by the presence of these worthy knights of the quill, who gallantly drew the fire of a thousand visual batteries, we escaped observation and without scars. There was a little confusion of nomenclature on the part of Pratt and Thurston, but it was at last settled that the Doctor should lead the press-gang, supported by the major as first assistant, and The Advertiser as second assistant pencil sharpener. This was all very well in theory. In practice it proved a failure.

In waiting, and the observance of many ladies, we found Dr. Pratt, of the Corning Journal, and Maj. Thurston, of the Plainville Advertiser. Favored by the presence of these worthy knights of the quill, who gallantly drew the fire of a thousand visual batteries, we escaped observation and without scars. There was a little confusion of nomenclature on the part of Pratt and Thurston, but it was at last settled that the Doctor should lead the press-gang, supported by the major as first assistant, and The Advertiser as second assistant pencil sharpener. This was all very well in theory. In practice it proved a failure.

In waiting, and the observance of many ladies, we found Dr. Pratt, of the Corning Journal, and Maj. Thurston, of the Plainville Advertiser. Favored by the presence of these worthy knights of the quill, who gallantly drew the fire of a thousand visual batteries, we escaped observation and without scars. There was a little confusion of nomenclature on the part of Pratt and Thurston, but it was at last settled that the Doctor should lead the press-gang, supported by the major as first assistant, and The Advertiser as second assistant pencil sharpener. This was all very well in theory. In practice it proved a failure.

In waiting, and the observance of many ladies, we found Dr. Pratt, of the Corning Journal, and Maj. Thurston, of the Plainville Advertiser. Favored by the presence of these worthy knights of the quill, who gallantly drew the fire of a thousand visual batteries, we escaped observation and without scars. There was a little confusion of nomenclature on the part of Pratt and Thurston, but it was at last settled that the Doctor should lead the press-gang, supported by the major as first assistant, and The Advertiser as second assistant pencil sharpener. This was all very well in theory. In practice it proved a failure.

In waiting, and the observance of many ladies, we found Dr. Pratt, of the Corning Journal, and Maj. Thurston, of the Plainville Advertiser. Favored by the presence of these worthy knights of the quill, who gallantly drew the fire of a thousand visual batteries, we escaped observation and without scars. There was a little confusion of nomenclature on the part of Pratt and Thurston, but it was at last settled that the Doctor should lead the press-gang, supported by the major as first assistant, and The Advertiser as second assistant pencil sharpener. This was all very well in theory. In practice it proved a failure.

In waiting, and the observance of many ladies, we found Dr. Pratt, of the Corning Journal, and Maj. Thurston, of the Plainville Advertiser. Favored by the presence of these worthy knights of the quill, who gallantly drew the fire of a thousand visual batteries, we escaped observation and without scars. There was a little confusion of nomenclature on the part of Pratt and Thurston, but it was at last settled that the Doctor should lead the press-gang, supported by the major as first assistant, and The Advertiser as second assistant pencil sharpener. This was all very well in theory. In practice it proved a failure.

In waiting, and the observance of many ladies, we found Dr. Pratt, of the Corning Journal, and Maj. Thurston, of the Plainville Advertiser. Favored by the presence of these worthy knights of the quill, who gallantly drew the fire of a thousand visual batteries, we escaped observation and without scars. There was a little confusion of nomenclature on the part of Pratt and Thurston, but it was at last settled that the Doctor should lead the press-gang, supported by the major as first assistant, and The Advertiser as second assistant pencil sharpener. This was all very well in theory. In practice it proved a failure.

In waiting, and the observance of many ladies, we found Dr. Pratt, of the Corning Journal, and Maj. Thurston, of the Plainville Advertiser. Favored by the presence of these worthy knights of the quill, who gallantly drew the fire of a thousand visual batteries, we escaped observation and without scars. There was a little confusion of nomenclature on the part of Pratt and Thurston, but it was at last settled that the Doctor should lead the press-gang, supported by the major as first assistant, and The Advertiser as second assistant pencil sharpener. This was all very well in theory. In practice it proved a failure.

In waiting, and the observance of many ladies, we found Dr. Pratt, of the Corning Journal, and Maj. Thurston, of the Plainville Advertiser. Favored by the presence of these worthy knights of the quill, who gallantly drew the fire of a thousand visual batteries, we escaped observation and without scars. There was a little confusion of nomenclature on the part of Pratt and Thurston, but it was at last settled that the Doctor should lead the press-gang, supported by the major as first assistant, and The Advertiser as second assistant pencil sharpener. This was all very well in theory. In practice it proved a failure.

If the State will now furnish means to enlarge the institutions, we trust it will next winter, Tioga county may have the honor of the first school in Pennsylvania.

We are indebted to Mr. James H. Bosard for the following report of the ALUMNI MEETING.

The Alumni Meeting was to its members by far the most interesting part of the commencement exercises. This association was established a year ago, and therefore this was their first meeting.

The order of exercises was somewhat crude. The order of exercises was somewhat crude. The order of exercises was somewhat crude.

The reading of the historical sketches, as was afterwards remarked by Mr. Allen, "seemed to carry us back to the time when each particular class was with us." The sketches of the class of 1865, being first in order were read by Miss Ella E. Johnson, of Monroe, Bradford Co., Penna.

Miss Johnson had arranged her sketches in such a manner as to bring the class of 1865, and doffly joining them together, that each member of her class seemed standing before us, and relating in his own peculiar manner, the scenes that had in any way modified his career.

Then Miss Mattie J. Buchanan read sketches from the lives of the members of the class of 1866. These sketches had been written and arranged by the members of the class, and had succeeded in weaving together incidents of actual life, and experience since, that it seemed but a continuation of what we had seen and heard of.

Then Miss Mattie J. Buchanan read sketches from the lives of the members of the class of 1866. These sketches had been written and arranged by the members of the class, and had succeeded in weaving together incidents of actual life, and experience since, that it seemed but a continuation of what we had seen and heard of.

Then Miss Mattie J. Buchanan read sketches from the lives of the members of the class of 1866. These sketches had been written and arranged by the members of the class, and had succeeded in weaving together incidents of actual life, and experience since, that it seemed but a continuation of what we had seen and heard of.

Then Miss Mattie J. Buchanan read sketches from the lives of the members of the class of 1866. These sketches had been written and arranged by the members of the class, and had succeeded in weaving together incidents of actual life, and experience since, that it seemed but a continuation of what we had seen and heard of.

Then Miss Mattie J. Buchanan read sketches from the lives of the members of the class of 1866. These sketches had been written and arranged by the members of the class, and had succeeded in weaving together incidents of actual life, and experience since, that it seemed but a continuation of what we had seen and heard of.

Then Miss Mattie J. Buchanan read sketches from the lives of the members of the class of 1866. These sketches had been written and arranged by the members of the class, and had succeeded in weaving together incidents of actual life, and experience since, that it seemed but a continuation of what we had seen and heard of.

Then Miss Mattie J. Buchanan read sketches from the lives of the members of the class of 1866. These sketches had been written and arranged by the members of the class, and had succeeded in weaving together incidents of actual life, and experience since, that it seemed but a continuation of what we had seen and heard of.

Then Miss Mattie J. Buchanan read sketches from the lives of the members of the class of 1866. These sketches had been written and arranged by the members of the class, and had succeeded in weaving together incidents of actual life, and experience since, that it seemed but a continuation of what we had seen and heard of.

Then Miss Mattie J. Buchanan read sketches from the lives of the members of the class of 1866. These sketches had been written and arranged by the members of the class, and had succeeded in weaving together incidents of actual life, and experience since, that it seemed but a continuation of what we had seen and heard of.

Then Miss Mattie J. Buchanan read sketches from the lives of the members of the class of 1866. These sketches had been written and arranged by the members of the class, and had succeeded in weaving together incidents of actual life, and experience since, that it seemed but a continuation of what we had seen and heard of.

Then Miss Mattie J. Buchanan read sketches from the lives of the members of the class of 1866. These sketches had been written and arranged by the members of the class, and had succeeded in weaving together incidents of actual life, and experience since, that it seemed but a continuation of what we had seen and heard of.

Then Miss Mattie J. Buchanan read sketches from the lives of the members of the class of 1866. These sketches had been written and arranged by the members of the class, and had succeeded in weaving together incidents of actual life, and experience since, that it seemed but a continuation of what we had seen and heard of.

Then Miss Mattie J. Buchanan read sketches from the lives of the members of the class of 1866. These sketches had been written and arranged by the members of the class, and had succeeded in weaving together incidents of actual life, and experience since, that it seemed but a continuation of what we had seen and heard of.

Then Miss Mattie J. Buchanan read sketches from the lives of the members of the class of 1866. These sketches had been written and arranged by the members of the class, and had succeeded in weaving together incidents of actual life, and experience since, that it seemed but a continuation of what we had seen and heard of.

Then Miss Mattie J. Buchanan read sketches from the lives of the members of the class of 1866. These sketches had been written and arranged by the members of the class, and had succeeded in weaving together incidents of actual life, and experience since, that it seemed but a continuation of what we had seen and heard of.

Then Miss Mattie J. Buchanan read sketches from the lives of the members of the class of 1866. These sketches had been written and arranged by the members of the class, and had succeeded in weaving together incidents of actual life, and experience since, that it seemed but a continuation of what we had seen and heard of.

Then Miss Mattie J. Buchanan read sketches from the lives of the members of the class of 1866. These sketches had been written and arranged by the members of the class, and had succeeded in weaving together incidents of actual life, and experience since, that it seemed but a continuation of what we had seen and heard of.

Then Miss Mattie J. Buchanan read sketches from the lives of the members of the class of 1866. These sketches had been written and arranged by the members of the class, and had succeeded in weaving together incidents of actual life, and experience since, that it seemed but a continuation of what we had seen and heard of.

Then Miss Mattie J. Buchanan read sketches from the lives of the members of the class of 1866. These sketches had been written and arranged by the members of the class, and had succeeded in weaving together incidents of actual life, and experience since, that it seemed but a continuation of what we had seen and heard of.

Then Miss Mattie J. Buchanan read sketches from the lives of the members of the class of 1866. These sketches had been written and arranged by the members of the class, and had succeeded in weaving together incidents of actual life, and experience since, that it seemed but a continuation of what we had seen and heard of.

Then Miss Mattie J. Buchanan read sketches from the lives of the members of the class of 1866. These sketches had been written and arranged by the members of the class, and had succeeded in weaving together incidents of actual life, and experience since, that it seemed but a continuation of what we had seen and heard of.

Then Miss Mattie J. Buchanan read sketches from the lives of the members of the class of 1866. These sketches had been written and arranged by the members of the class, and had succeeded in weaving together incidents of actual life, and experience since, that it seemed but a continuation of what we had seen and heard of.

Then Miss Mattie J. Buchanan read sketches from the lives of the members of the class of 1866. These sketches had been written and arranged by the members of the class, and had succeeded in weaving together incidents of actual life, and experience since, that it seemed but a continuation of what we had seen and heard of.

Then Miss Mattie J. Buchanan read sketches from the lives of the members of the class of 1866. These sketches had been written and arranged by the members of the class, and had succeeded in weaving together incidents of actual life, and experience since, that it seemed but a continuation of what we had seen and heard of.

Then Miss Mattie J. Buchanan read sketches from the lives of the members of the class of 1866. These sketches had been written and arranged by the members of the class, and had succeeded in weaving together incidents of actual life, and experience since, that it seemed but a continuation of what we had seen and heard of.

Then Miss Mattie J. Buchanan read sketches from the lives of the members of the class of 1866. These sketches had been written and arranged by the members of the class, and had succeeded in weaving together incidents of actual life, and experience since, that it seemed but a continuation of what we had seen and heard of.

Then Miss Mattie J. Buchanan read sketches from the lives of the members of the class of 1866. These sketches had been written and arranged by the members of the class, and had succeeded in weaving together incidents of actual life, and experience since, that it seemed but a continuation of what we had seen and heard of.

Then Miss Mattie J. Buchanan read sketches from the lives of the members of the class of 1866. These sketches had been written and arranged by the members of the class, and had succeeded in weaving together incidents of actual life, and experience since, that it seemed but a continuation of what we had seen and heard of.

Then Miss Mattie J. Buchanan read sketches from the lives of the members of the class of 1866. These sketches had been written and arranged by the members of the class, and had succeeded in weaving together incidents of actual life, and experience since, that it seemed but a continuation of what we had seen and heard of.

NEW SPRING GOODS AT THE PEOPLES STORE CORNING, N. Y.

Dress Goods or Shawls. Cloths or Cassimers. Carpets. Foreign & Domestic Goods. Peoples Store.

Just Received. Large Stock of Frames. Picture Frame Mountings. For Sale.

TEA. GREAT U. S. TEA COMPANY. Peoples Store.

HALL'S VEGETABLE SQUAN HAIR REGENERATOR. SPECIAL NOTICES.

Hagan's Magnolia Balm. TO CONSUMPTIVES.

Errors of Youth. In Bankruptcy.

Domestic Goods. Fancy Dress Goods, Poppins, Silks, Shawls, Cotton and Woolen Goods.

Grocery Department. Groceries and Provisions. Carpets, &c., &c.

100,000 LBS. WOOL WANTED. 100,000 lbs. of Wool wanted.

Mrs. A. J. SOFIELD. Wholesale and Retail. Dress Goods or Shawls.

Wholesale and Retail. Dress Goods or Shawls. Peoples Store.

Wholesale and Retail. Dress Goods or Shawls. Peoples Store.

Wholesale and Retail. Dress Goods or Shawls. Peoples Store.

Wholesale and Retail. Dress Goods or Shawls. Peoples Store.

Wholesale and Retail. Dress Goods or Shawls. Peoples Store.

Wholesale and Retail. Dress Goods or Shawls. Peoples Store.

Wholesale and Retail. Dress Goods or Shawls. Peoples Store.

Wholesale and Retail. Dress Goods or Shawls. Peoples Store.

Wholesale and Retail. Dress Goods or Shawls. Peoples Store.

LOCAL ADVICE. SALUTIFER. For CASH!

Wholesale and Retail. Dress Goods or Shawls. Peoples Store.

Wholesale and Retail. Dress Goods or Shawls. Peoples Store.

Wholesale and Retail. Dress Goods or Shawls. Peoples Store.

Wholesale and Retail. Dress Goods or Shawls. Peoples Store.

Wholesale and Retail. Dress Goods or Shawls. Peoples Store.

Wholesale and Retail. Dress Goods or Shawls. Peoples Store.

Wholesale and Retail. Dress Goods or Shawls. Peoples Store.

Wholesale and Retail. Dress Goods or Shawls. Peoples Store.

Wholesale and Retail. Dress Goods or Shawls. Peoples Store.

SELLING OFF AT COST. FOR CASH!

Wholesale and Retail. Dress Goods or Shawls. Peoples Store.

Wholesale and Retail. Dress Goods or Shawls. Peoples Store.