Sixty-six companies apply for permission to join his regiment. Regiment is raised to the standard of sixteen companies, or 1,700 men. Is known as the celebrated " Knapp's Battery." 's ordered to Harper's Ferry, then 'the Front.' Is assigned to the command of the Maryland Heights. October, 1861, he and his men fight and win, against a largely superior Rebel force, commanded by Generals

Geary being wounded in the right knee. March 8, 1861, transferred to the Shenandoah Valley, where he captured Leesburg, and dislodged the reliefs from their strongholds at Snick-er's, Ashby's, Manassas, and Chester Gaps. April 25, 1862, promoted to the rank of

Brigadier General. June 26, 1862, takes a conspicuous part in the battle of Cedar Mountain, steamer Oregon; spends that month, and is again wounded, slightly in the left foot, and severely in the right arm. May 1, 2, and 3, 1963, leads his division battle of Chancellorsville. It distinguishes itself by deeds of great bravery, and receives the designation, which it retained to the end of the ··· White'Star.'' July, 1863, is a prominent actor, while his division, in the

A Syracuse paper relates the following as an incident happening the other night at the Empire Hotel in that city:

'Help! help! I'm suffocating! Get me out! Quick! quick! or I shall die.'
Such were the words uttered in sepulchral tones, that resounded through the apartments of the Empire House, ofter the barders and retired to their after the boarders had retired to their beds, for the night.—Of course they struck terror to the soul of the sympa-thetic inmates, and aroused their dormant energies to instant investigation as to the source from whence the sounds proceeded. Men soon rushed to the windows and undressed women to the halls. Bells were rung, and servants 'Help! help! Tear down the house before. 'It is a woman ?'

'Who is it?' 'What is it?' passed in quick sucession from one to another, and general alarm and consternation prevailed unid which the bewildered woman heard some say—

'I am dying, dying, dying!' faintly muttered the mysterious voice, and the death rattle was heard, as though the poor victim was about to give up the 'Courage man! we will have you out.—Here, take hold of this rope,' and searchers on the house top let down a rong rope, procured for the purpose.

All was now in a state of excitement unsurpassed. The anxious scarches heeded not the cold night wind. Their work was one of mercy, and like true hearted men, they were determined that no effort should be spared to rescue a human being from such an awful fate if possible.
'I can't reach it!' faintly echoed the voice. Lower and lower down went the rope.

'More rope, a little more, more, more boarts of the rescuer yet,' and the hearts of the rescuers leaped for joy, while all gathered closer, and prepared to lend their energies for 'a long pull, a strong pull, and a pull altogether,'

'A little more rope,' implored the sufferer, but alas! the whole length of hearts, the searchers commenced raising the rope—yards and yards of the fibrous manufacture were raised, but there was no weight at the end.

THE DEED OF A TRUE HERO.-The

N. Y. Post contains the following ac count of a noble deed: An exhibition of noble devotion t uty, under the most fearful-trial to which human nature could be subjected is to be recorded of an obscure servant of a railroad near this city. The deed demands the warmest and widest recognition. It needs no fine words to em-pellish it. The simplest recital of the fact suffices for placing the action before the world as worthy of homage. Albert G. Drecker is the watchman of the Passale rivdr drawbridge on the New York and Newark Railroad, whose business it is to see that the draw is closed upon the approach of the A. M. Dunham, Clarinda Teal, D. Ol- trains. On Friday afternoon last, just Charleston, No. 669, Wm. M. Moor, before a passenger train was to pass the bridge, the draw was open and Mr. Drecker began to close it. The train was not yet in sight at this moment, but the watchman knew it was coming, and that no time should be lost in putting of Mr. Drecker, ten years old, fell from To save the child's life would be an easy matter, but Mr Drecker now saw would involve the destruction of the We may well suppose it was a moment of supreme agony. His child was drowning before his own eyes, and its life could only be purchased at the loss of many other lives that were in his as was forced upon Drecker!
