Dick stood looking in the window of a gift store. He ought to have been in his place at the office a balf an hour behis place at the omce a half an hour before, but he stayed over night with Phil
Barney, and oversiept himself.
'I might as well be hung for a sheep as a lamb,' thought he; 'I'm late anyhow, and I'll take, a peep in here and finish my eigar. It is should buy any of these gift things. I should buy any of these gift things. I should hick in my life. Some folks are always in both my life. Some folks are always in luck. There is Tom Porter. He has not been on the street any longer than I have, and his salary is raised; and he has one hundred dollars in the saving's bank,— It's too bad. I've a good mind to go out west, where wages are better and hoard cheap.

Just then, to use Dick's language, jas bed light wild have it he again. bad luck would have it, his uncle Rich-good will he particularly valued, drove up in a carriage, to call on an architect whose office was over the gift-store.

'What are you doing here; Dick,' at half after nine in the morning? Throw away that cigar; get in my carriage, and I'll take you to the office. I want to talk with you? to talk with you, The architect was out, and uncle Richard's feet, that had been in active use sixty-two years, carried him up and down the stairs and back to his seat about as soon as his eighteen year-old nephew could walk from the window to the carriage. What does the savage old fellow want of me? This is just a piece of my bad luck. thought Dick. Uncle Richard got in, and repeated his question. Why a int you at your office? At your age I began my work at six o'clock by filling the lamps and sweeping the store. You have one of the heat places in town and the core of the best places in town, and I'm afraid you'll lose it if you hang around mornings in this style. Dick, if you were not my only sister's orphan son, I'd wipe my hands of you.

'It would be just my luck, uncle, if you'did." Nensense! Dick, don't use that word to me. It is a word of the devil's coining. There is no such thing as luck. You call me a lucky man, do you? said uncle Richard. Dick nodded his head. 'Well, I didn't sleep nights with idle fellows like Phil Barney. I, worked to learn the business, and make myself necessary to my employers, so that they would have to take me into partnership when I became a man-not with my eye on the clock and hand on my cap ready to rush home. I wore pants a lit-tle too short for me, and coat sleeves that would not cover my wrists, and coarse boots, till I could honestly pay for better ones. I walked when I wanted to ride, worked when I wanted to play, fasted when I wanted to eat, held my tongue when I wanted to make pertreplies, got up when I wanted to lie abed, and went to bed when I wanted to lie abed, and went to bed when I wanted to lie abed, and went to bed when I wanted to sit up. ed to sit up; and to cap it all, I never felt too old to obey my mother's wishes. The devil soon got tired hanging around me whispering about good tuck. I laughed in his face, and now have the reward of a life of honesty, active labor, through God's blessing?

through God's blessing. Dick, what are you going to do?'
'Uncle, sometimes I think I'll go to Chicago or California, where so many young men make fortunes.' Boots and shoes, 'You'll make a beggar or a thief if you do. The West is overrun now with silly fellows that are in search of luck. The men who succeed out there work just as I have done. Your luck lies in your feet and hands and head. to me, Dick. Don't run after luck. It is a device of the devil to lead young men into fatal pitfalls, gambling-dens, men into lattic pittalis, gautoting and jails.

Just then the carriage stopped. Tom Porter hurried by on his way to the bank, too busy to see Dick or any one.

'Look at Tom Porter, Dick. Instead of hanging around a gift-store window in the middle of the morning, spougling eigars, and dreaming about good luck, he is hard at work learning business and gaining the esteem of his employ

Grease stains, from grease, oil, etc., are simply removed by alkalies or soap, or by essential oils dissolved in alcohol. Alkalies, such as solutions of saleratus, or liquid ammonia, will remove them safely from all substances without color. For other substances, the alcoholic solution spoken of will do, and among them burning fluid answers a good purpose. But the best of all is the new preparation, termed benzine, which exceeds anything else we know of in efficiency. Lay a paper under the fabric and apply the liquid. Oil spots and stains from candlesnuff, or woolen table-covers, paint spots on garments, etc., are thus perfectly removed, without the slightest discoloration.

THE CHURCH UNION.

This paper has been recently enlarged to mammoth proportions. It is the languar artificious papers in the world. Is the leading organ of the Union Movement, and opposes ritualism, close communion; exclusiveness and church caste. It is the only, paper that publishes Henry Ward Beecher's Sermons, which it does every week, just as they are delivered,—without qualification or correction by him. It advocates universal suffrage; a union of christians at the polis; and the rights of labor. It has the best Agricultural Department of any paper in the world; publishes and the rights of labor. It has the best Agricultural Department of any paper in the world; publishes stories for the family, and for the destruction of social evils, its editorial management is impersonal; its writers and editors are from every branch of the church, and from every grade of society. It has been apily termed the freest organ of thought in the world. Such a paper, offering premiums of Sowing Machines, Dictionaries, Appleton's Cyclopedia, Planos, Organs for Churches, etc, makes one of the best papers for canvassers in the world.

Every Congregation may obtain a Communion Service, an Organ, a Melodeon, a Bible, or a Life Insurance Policy for its Pastor, or almost any other needful thing, by a club of subscribers.
