The mists of morning cling.

No, I love thee, sweetest, And the wandering dove— I send her with a righ to thee, A little verse of love.

"Go count the silken tresses That hang on yonder tree; So many are my loving thoughts, And so they cling to thee!";

THE DOCTOR'S LESSON.-Near the of i.—, in the State of Kentucky, there resides a venerable man of letters, who regains a respectable livelihood by teaching "the young idea how to shoot." The young gentlemen comprising his academy (as the learned man termed it) were noted for mischief and fun, and nothing gave them more satisfaction than to have a jolly time, at the expense of others. For some time the Dr. had been losing some very fine pigs, and he could not for the life of him imagine where they vanished to, until one night while passing the bed-room of his pu-pil, he inhaled the very suspicious of or of ried pork. Instantly, all was clear; he e, at last, was an explanation of the my stery that had baffiled his utmost skiil. After considering the matter he resolved to give the young gentlemen a les on that would have a tendency to elevate their morals. It seems that the bo, s getting hungry over a 'latin translat on' one evening had hit upon the happy expedient of "hooking" the Dr's pigs, and as the pig pen was immediately below their window, this was no a very difficult undertaking. Accordingly the boys rigged up their father's basket, and attached ropes to each end, and covering the best of the property of the each end, and covering the bottom of i wi h shelled corn, lowered it from their wi dow, into the pen. Their unsuspicious victims roaming around would tip the basket over to explore, when up the usual over to explore, when up they would go. The Prof. watching this skillful engineering one evening resolved to profit by it. One dark rainy and disagreeable night the boys again lovered their basket, and the Prof. being on the plant great over softly and ing on the alert, crept over softly and de posited himself in the "elevator." The boys began to pull, but finding it much heavier than usual, called out their leader.

"Pull away any how," was Sam's re-Bo up the Dr. began to ascend. One -young scamp, more inquisitive than the rest, poked his head out of the window to get a peep, when oh, horrow! instead of the snow, it was the doctor. Constirnation seized them all, and the Dr. was in great danger of being "dropped," when their leader quieted them and spoke in a whisper, audible to the Dr. as follows: "Sam, that rope is very rotten, don't pu'll too hard!"

"Sam, we've got the old sow!"

Imagine the poor Dr.'s position.—cold drops of perspiration stood upon his temples, and in a faltering voice he begged them "not to let the rope break." Sam in well affected surprise, very consolingly remarked, "that even if he did fall, it wouldn't do more than break his arm or leg." After which he shut the window, leaving the poor victim dang ling in mid-air, the cold, pitiless raiu beating down upon him, and with no inmediate means of relief, except by his heartless captors.

"I'll forgive you all, and you shall have lunch every night, if you'll only let me down," bawled the Dr.

"Will you sweet?" description.

"Will you swear it?" demanded Sam. dead than alive, he reached the ground. The Dr. kept his word, the boys were delighted and there as no more pigstealing.

SWIMMER'S CRAMP.—On a fine summer's day some men are bathing in the sea. One of the, man excellent swimmer, suddenly cries out, "I'm drowning l" sinks and is no more seen until his dead body floats ashore some hours after wards. This was the case of Mi. G. Waugh, whose lamentable death was noticed in the journals a few days since, and the dreadful incident was but a repetition of what occurs sev-ral times each bathing season. How is this terribly sudden drowning to be explained? The victim is generally said to have been attacked by cramps and manuals advert to the subject, and direct the swimmer who is seized to thrust his legs out violently and forcibly bend his foot upward. The explanation seems to be generally accepted, but it does not really explain this a wfully mysterious sinking. We do not need to ask a good swimmer whether cramp in the leg, however severe would cause him to sink suddenly, and without a struggle, in the sea. It is impossible. The human body is specifically lighter than water, that no effort is required to preserve it from sinking in that fluid. A swim-mer seized with leg cramp would in-stinctively throw his head as far back as it would go, conscious that he might rengin affoat in this position without the need of moving a muscle. The unfortunate swimmer who drowns under these circumstances always goes down suddenly, and without a struggle. This signifies that the body suddenly becomes heavier than water. It can only do that by losing the air which is contained within the cavity of the chest, and the propability seems to be that the cramp which happens is a cramp of the respiratory muscles by which the ratory muscles, by which the expansion of the lungs is prevented or the air is forced out. Death would then occur as it often occurs in tetanus. This is a subject which has strangely escaped observation. Inquiry must, of course, be limited, for there is no opportunity of questioning the unfortunate victims; but the testimony of observators or of but the testimony of observers, or of those who have themselves experienced any kind of cramp in bathing, might be usefully brought to bear upon it. The feeling of insecurity which these cases occasion to swimmers is terrible. Could we but ascertain the exact of Could we but ascertain the exact ciroumstances, it is concelvable that some measures might be devised by which their occurrence could be prevented. It must be remembered that swimming implies a very much more violent muscular exercise than is apt to appear. It seems probable—though it is by no means certain—that the muscles of respiration, which are powerfully employed in swimming, may occasionally be reized with cramp as result of unusual exertion, with the effect we have described of causing compression of the measures might be devised by which described of causing compression of the chest. If such be the case, it is tolerably certain that regular and graduated gymnastic exercise would be the surest afeguard against an affection of mus-

TIOGA, PA. AVING obtained the agency from the man. uncturers of the above named instruments we have the facilities for furnishing them at prices to compare favorably with those of dealers in either the same or other reed instruments. in either the same or other reed instruments. Their reputation is such that searcely anything need be said regarding their being desirable, having been awarded premiums and medals at the principal Fairs and Institutes, both in this and foreign countries. Many fine modern improvements, which are so desirable in all good reed instruments, are owned and retained for their exclusive use by the manufacturers of these instruments. Hence it is, while they claim strength and durability, together with volume and quality of tone equal to any, they excel al other reed instruments, in the variety and com-bination of tones which can be produced.
