HIRING A BRAKEMAN.

Many years since, soon after the opening of the Norwich and Worcester Ballroad, a stout looking innocent, aboutaix feet in his stockings, with thews and thighs to match, stood in the depot at Worcester, with evident admiration of the "bran new" cars and snorting locomotive which had just arrived at the station. A rough citizen stood near him, watched his undisguised wonder attentively, and drawing near, entered into conversation with him. He was "down from Vermont after work and wanted to get a chance on one of these here railroads. !" Said the other : "Why don't you go and see the Superintendent.? "W-a-l, I would if I know'd where to find him." "Oh! then come along with me-I'm going right to his office.!! Accordingly off went the twain, right to the store where that demurest of all spider waiting for any unsophisticated

"Ah!" said the wag who acted as pilot, "there he is. Here's a young man, Mr. B., who wants a berth on the railroad as brakeman." Jem was posted immediately.

"Well, I don't know. We've had a good many applications for the post, and in fact I had engaged a man to go out on the train, but he is not up to his engagement, and I will talk to you. Have you ever been acqustomed to railroad-

"W-a-l, no, I nin't; but I guess I could learn it mighty soon. What's the wages?" "Thirty-six dollars a month and clothes." "W-a-l, mister, I'm ready, of you say so, to take right hold." "Very well, then; I'll send you out on this train; but I wish to put you upon your guard with reference to one matter, and that is, there is a set of troublesome fellows continually hanging around the train, pretending to belong to the road. Some of them may interfere with you. If they do, put most as soon as expressed. "What are you doing there?" asked the conductor, who returned with the was rigid with fear, and her hands men; and stepping upon the car, he placed his hand upon Jonathan with a view to summary ejectment, A brief struggle ensued, at the termination of which the conductor lay sprawling upon his back, with the small brakeman's head jammed between his legs. "Come on ye darned heathers!" shouted Jonathan, now fairly roused-'come on! I'll learn you to cut up didoes around me. I'm hired, I be.

> A fresh struggle ensued between our hero and some half dozen others employed on the train, who had gathered around, and Jonathan was overpowered, when an explanation took place, and the Superintendent's "store" was sought for, but could not be found, as the incorrigible wag had not been so incautious as to make the engagement in his too practical joke, no proof could be had, for by a shrewd management of the muscles of his face, and cool assurance aided by a different dress, he succeeded in arguing Jonathan out of his suspicion, the latter having charged him with the hoax. The best part of the joke was the denouement. The actual superintendent hearing of the indomitable pluck displayed by the Vermonter, sent for him, and it is said that he now satisfactorily fills an important post upon one of the great
