off of several of our leading makes, and in all cases where we do so, we give our customers the condent of The Day. We have heard a good deal of Potter county in our day. On a certain gecasion a resident of that county, on being asked of our government, are each building an Alaska how he liked the country, replied : "It is everythink that could be desired, with one exception : there are about three weeks in the heat of the summer, when we have no sleighing-the balance of the year, we manage to get along pretty well."

We have supposed that this story was an exageration but The Day correspondent, speaking of the Jersey Shore, Pine Creek, and Buffalo R. R. mays, "This line will pass for about 150 miles through the undeveloped mineral regions of Potter county," and as we have great confidenge in The Day, we are disposed now to believe that it is not an exaguration of the state of (the climate in the extreme northern part of that "county. HERMAIC SOCIETY.-Col. A. E. Niles delivered a very interesting lecture before this society last Friday evening, at the Court House, giving an account of his experience South, and of the condition of thingsomoro particularly in Mis sissippi. The house was full, and the audience greatly amused and diverted by the discourse -He comes up squarely to the point, with the Jirectness and intropidity of a soldier, uses vigor. ous language to express his views of things, and bas's good reason for what he asserts. He says that reconstruction is premature-that against the North, and that it will continue so .---The rising generation are taught to hate Yankees. In this situation, ho ascerts his belief that reconstruction should have been delayed twenty-South should be placed again in the hands of. those who sought to destroy the government. The Colonel told many amusing stories, among them one of a conversation he overheard, in which an ex-rebel soldier stated as follows :

"When I first went into the army, I thought 1 was a match for eight Yankres. After about two years, I thought I was enough for four; but be fore the war elesed, 1 got down to one, and I wanted him tied.".

Gossip .- A strange lingo is this that some call gossip, I say, dame. A ghastly port of business, thus to fill the night with holigoblins. ransacking the chambers of the soul with dark lanterns, now and then making fantastic shadows dance about to hide them from each other, for fear the image shall expose some hideous deformity to the grim intelligence of evil spirits, playing hide and seek against each other. How these spirits ride a hobby; to be sure! There comes a fancy of the old shoemaker, from "A Tale of Two Cities," na the weary, oh, so weary ! hands ply the thread, growing shorter and shorter, till the last stitch is taken-and yet there comes no rest for the toiler. And little Nell and the old curiosity man, wandering about all thro' the dark night, midet the glare of the furnaces, making pandemonium of a one-time solitude of Nature' How he folters and looks back, and She only touches to teach us, when we will not be taught in any other way. There are many who are weary, because the heart is sad ; many whose miles are but the grim reflection of a fading life, like the faint blush of autumn flowers set in pale, departing colorr, by the early frosts. But by and by come the snows of winter, to crystalize the soul in death and bring relief at last !--And how kindly is this quiet sleep of nature, i from which no forrow can swake us! And more kind, the eternal rest of that immortal springtime, wherein are photographed all the beauties of the roul in celestial images.

And not all fictitious are these guests of the aemory. Some are real, while so infinite are the phases of human experience, that none can be more them red. Infinity must contain them all.
