Stalks gaunt through hamlet, town and plain And often it's uncommon hot! So give me autumn! Calm and cool, With woodland russet, gold and brown,

When every evening as a rule, The sun more early settles down. Still, that it has no drawback , too, I dare not, I admit, insist, While pains rheumatic wield the screw

On foot and unkle, arm and wrist Therefore shall winter be my choice! When silent lies the landscape white, Save for Dan Robin's cheery voice, Who sings from morning until night.

But then in winter chilblains come, And we're with frosts and chill oppresse The blood grows cold, the fingers numb, It's hard to say which season's best.

THE CUTEST YANKEE TRICK YET

A Connecticut broom peddlershrewd chap, from the land of steady habits wooden clocks, schoolmaster, and other fixings-drov through the streets of Providence heavily laden with corn brooms. He had called at several stores and offered his load, or ever so small a portion of it; but when he wanted the cash, and nothing else in payment. they had uninformly given him to un-store on the west side, and once more offered his wares. "Well, I want the brooms badly enough," said the merchant, "but what will you take in pay?"

derstand that they had brooms enough and that he might go further. At length he drove up to a large wholesale

This was a poser. The peddler was aching to get rid of his brooms. He despised the very sight of the brooms; but he would sooner sell a single broom for cash than the whole load for any other article-especially that which he could not dispose of as readily as he could brooms. After a moments hesitation however, he screwed his courage to the, sticking point-it required some courage, after having lost his chance of selling his load half a dozen times by a similar answer-and frankly told the merchant he must have cash. Of course, the merchant, protested that cash was scarce, and that he must purchase, if he purchased at all, with what he had in his store to pay with. He really wanted print: the brooms, and he did not hesitate to say so; but the times were hard, and he had notes to pay, and had goods that must be disposed of.

Finally, he said he would put the goods at the cost price, for the sake of trading, and would take the whole load of brooms which the peddler had labored so unsuccessfully at the other stores to dispose of.

"So unload the brooms," said he to the man from Connecticut, "and select any articles from my store, and you shall have them at cost price." The peddler scratched his head,-

There was an idea there, as the sequel shows plainly enough. "I tell you what it is," he answered at last, "just say them terms for half the load, and cash for t'other half, and save country dealers their expenses to the little I'm your man. Blowed ef I don't sell But then. out if Connecticut sinks, with all her broom stuff, the next minnit." The merchant hesitated a moment, but finally concluded the chance a good one. He would be getting half the brooms for something that would not sell as readily; as for the cost price, i was an easy gammon in regard to it .-The bargain was struck, the brooms were brought in, and the cash for half of them was paid over. "Now, what will you have for the remainder of your bill?" asked the merchant.

The peddler scratched his head again and this time more vigorously. He walked the floor, whistled, and drummed with his fingers on the head of a barrel. By-and-by his reply came slowly, deliberately, and emphaticity: "You Providence, fellers are cute;

you sell at cost, pretty much all of you, and make money. I don't see how its ger or better lot of done. Now, I don't know about your goods, barrin' one article, and if I take anything else I may be cheated. So seein' as 'twon't make any odds with then I have, and am selling them at a bargain you, I guess I'll take brooms. I know them like a book and can swear to jest what you paid for 'em."

And so saying, the peddler commenced reloading his brooms, and having deposited half of his former load, jumpon his cart with a regular Connecticut grin, and leaving the merchant cursing his impudence and his own stupidity, drove off in search of another customer.

THE Boston Watchman and Reflector. the ablest paper published by the Baptists says:

Let honest citizens rejoice at this record of the first year of Grant's administration and take courage for the future. Those who complain, and there are always such, are disappointed politicians, political partisans, speculators, gold gamblers, and impracticable and sperit of secession ranking in their hearts. So long as these are dissatisfied, and so long as honest citizens are pleased, we may look cheerily upon the future, and pray that the remaing three years of President Grant's administration may be as his first, and much more abundant.

The following is a statement of the bonded indebtedness of the several prominent cities of the Union. Cincinnati, it will be seen, though the fourth city of magnitude, stands nint in the order of debt: Philadelphia, $36,637,725; New York city, $85,000,000; Baltimore. $24,947,985; Boston, $16,959,500; Brook. lyn, $14,139,419; St Louis, $12,952,000; Chicago, $11,000,000; New Orleans, $10, 740,850; Cincinnati, $5,020,000; Louisville, $4,952,199; San Francisco, $4,709,-100; Memphis, $3,623,791; Detroit, $3,-272,195; Pittsburg, $3,160,000; Cleveland, $1,581,000; Buffalo, $858,500.

A humorous young man was driving a horse, which was in the habit of stopping at every house on the road side.-Passing a country tavern, where were collected together some dozen countrymen, the beast, as usual, ran opposite the door, and then stopped, in spite of the young man, who applied his whip with all his might to drive the vicious horse on; the men on the porch commenced a hearty laugh; and some inquired if he would sell that horse. "Yes," said the young man, "but I cannot recommend him, he once be-longed to a butcher, and stops when-ever he hears any calves bleat.' The crowd retired to the bar-room in silence
