Poet's Corner.
THE NAME IN THE SAND.

BY GEORGE D. FRENCH.
Alone I walked the ocean strand,

And no memento 'twill quickly be

Where I have trod the sandy shore

Of time, and he to me no more;

My name, the year and day;

As onward from the spot I passed,

One lingering look behind I cast,

A wave came rolling high and fast,

And washed my lines away.

And no memento 'twill quickly be

Where I have trod the sandy shore

Of time, and he to me no more;

My name, the year and day;

As onward from the spot I passed,

One lingering look behind I cast,

A wave came rolling high and fast,

And washed my lines away.

And no memento 'twill quickly be

Where I have trod the sandy shore

Of time, and he to me no more;

My name, the year and day;

As onward from the spot I passed,

One lingering look behind I cast,

A wave came rolling high and fast,

And washed my lines away.

And no memento 'twill quickly be

Where I have trod the sandy shore

Of time, and he to me no more;

My name, the year and day;

As onward from the spot I passed,

One lingering look behind I cast,

A wave came rolling high and fast,

And washed my lines away.

And no memento 'twill quickly be

Where I have trod the sandy shore

Of time, and he to me no more;

My name, the year and day;

As onward from the spot I passed,

One lingering look behind I cast,

A wave came rolling high and fast,

And washed my lines away.

And no memento 'twill quickly be

Where I have trod the sandy shore

Of time, and he to me no more;

Presently the front door opened,

Mr. Horton stepped into the street with a lady on his arm, whom he assisted into the buggy. The lady's face was thickly veiled, and the

could not guess even at her age, except that her movements seemed those of a young woman. Mr. Horton glanced at her side and saw that she was in the least likely to go.

He started Mrs. Archbold that it would be well to think of any great happening to one brought up with so much care. "You must scold her finely when she comes back, for giving us such a fright."

All he could say or do, however, led to no good result, and he was unwillingly compelled, by constant reiterations of the mother, to call in the aid of the police. Against this step he protested most emphatically;

he was afraid of the publicity that must inevitably ensue, and of the consequent scandal. His objections were overruled, and the case was entrusted to a well known detective of this city, who was full of power and authority to act as he thought best.

"What! is he in the city still?"

"Certainly, and doing a good business. He is a clever fellow. He knows that he had a much better chance of being seen than if he remained at home; and I must confess that if it had not been for a whim, I should never have caught him."

TEMPERANCE.

GERRIT SMITH TO HON. HENRY WILSON.

PETTERBORO, March 29th 1870.

HON HENRY WILSON, U. S. SENATE.

My Dear Sir:—I have read your paper on Temperance in the last N. Y.

Independent. Whatever I see from you I read eagerly, expecting to be enlightened by it. But this paper disappoints me.

No small part of my long life has been spent in beseeching men to vote for temperance. But, as they would not do so, I have been obliged to go to a bloodless end, and to die. Nearly as much of my life has been spent in beseeching men to vote for temperance. But, as they would not do so, I have been obliged to go to a bloodless end, and to die. Nearly as much of my life has been spent in beseeching men to vote for temperance. But, as they would not do so, I have been obliged to go to a bloodless end, and to die. Nearly as much of my life has been spent in beseech-ing men to vote for temperance.

But, as they would not do so,

I have been obliged to go to a bloodless end, and to die. Nearly as much of my life has been spent in beseeching men to vote for temperance. But, as they would not do so, I have lectures, singing and what not,

preparing for a fine edition, but,

alas, we were no farther than to prepare to build. Instead of going toward to the ballot-box to put our building, and to the state-house, we rested in our worthless preparations—worthless because rested in our worthless preparations—worthless because we
