And her dress just allowed out dufait hoot And he saw her as he smoked his eigar, And he came and stood at the ladder's foot. Kitty half blushed, then smiled and said,

"Yon't you come up and sit here now?" And Kitty's brother, a boy to dread, Saw and determined to raise a row, So he crept softly under the tree, Listening to all they had to say, Did the impish brother, and sly as could be;

Seized the ladder and bore it away, Then they saw him; and she, with a frown. Said "What will that awful boy do next?" And she called him the greatest scamp in town Yet I don't believe she was very much voxed, For her lips smiled though her eyes balf cried, As she saw the position of matters now, And he came over and sat by her side,

Leaving his place on the opposite bough. What could they do? They were captives Held as if by an iror band;

Kitty tossed back hor golden hair, And reflectively leaned her check on her "If," said he, "we for help should call,

They'd laugh to see us in such a plight, So we'd best stay here till the shadows fall, Or till some one or other comes in eight." And some one did come. It was Kitty's papa Who passed the tree his footsteps traced, $ And saw through the leaves a lighted cigar, · And a masculine arm around a feminine waist Kitty looked down and blushed at one,

And looked up and blushed at the other; Said her father, "These are nice goings on!" Said she, "It was all the fult of my brother."

What was the end? I'll tell you that, Some months after, 'mid silks and lace, And ribbons and riches, some ladies sat, Who were discussing the time and place As to when-so ran the debate-And where a certain wedding should be;

Then that impish brother was heard to state, "It had better come off in the apple tree." Boston Advertiser,

ADVENTURES OF A FAST YOUNG MAN.—"Thank you, I don't care if I print: do." said a fast young man, with a large pressed brick in his hat, as he surged up the other night, to the Indian that stands in front of a tobacco store on River street with a bunch of cast iron eigars in his hand. "I'll take one: I smoke sometimes, and he reached out to take the profferred weed, but the Indian would not give it up-he hung on to the cigars like grim death.

"Look here, old copperhead," said the fast young man, "none of that; no tricks upon travelers, or there'll be a muss; you and I'llifall out; somebody 'll get a punch in the head."

The Indian said never a word, but still hung on to the cast iron cigars. He was calm, dignified, unmoved, as an Indian should be, looking his assailant straight in the face, and no muscle moving a single bair.

"Yes, yes. Look at me, old feather. head; I'm one of 'em; I'm around; I'm full weight, potato measure, heaped up," and he placed himself in a position, threw back his coat, and squared off for a fight.

All the time the Indian never said word, and looked, without the least alarm, straight into the face of the fast is one of my biggest, brightest, and best things, youn man, still holding out a cigar in a You cannot get better youn man, still holding out a cigar in a mighty friendly sort of a way. The young man was plucky and just in a condition to resent any insult, or no insult at all. He was ready to "go in," but the calmness and imperturrability of the Indian rather cowed him, and he was disposed to reason the matter.

"I'll take on," said he, "certainly, I said so before; I freeze to a good cigar; I'm one of the smokers, I am. One of the old sort; and I'm edition number two, revised and corrected, with notes, author's writing on the title page, and copyright secured. Yes, I'll take one But the Indian said not a word, lookall the time straight in the face of the fast young man, and holding on to the

"Look here, old gimlet eye, I'm getting riled, my back's coming up, and you and I will have a turn; smell of that, old copperhead," and he thrust his fist under the nose of the cast-iron Indian, who said not a word, moved not a muscle, but kept right on looking straight into the face of the fast young man, as if not caring a fig for his threats or taking in at all the odor of his fist.

"Very well," said the fast young man, "I'm agreeable; I'm pround; look out for your ugly mug, old pumpkin head," and he let go a right-hander square against the nose of the cast-iron Indian, who never moved an inch nor stirred a muscle, looking with a calm unchanged dignity, as before, in the face of his enemy.

"Hallo!" cried the fast young man, in utter bewilderment, as he reeled back half way across the sidewalk, with the blood dripping from his skinned knuckles. "Hallo, hére's a go, here's an eye-opener, here's a thing to hunt for around the corner. I'm satisfied, old iron-face, I am. Enough said between gentlemen." Just then he caught sight of the tomahawk, and his hair began to rise. The Indian seemded to be making up his mind to us it. "Hold on!" cried the fast young man as he dodged around the awning, post. "Hold on! none of that; Ill apologize; I squat; I knocked under. Hold on, I say," he continued, as the Indian seemed to scowl with peculiar flerceness. "Hold on! Very well, I am off. I've business down street, people at home wiating for me, can't stay," and he bolted like a quarter horse down the street, and his cry, "Hold on," died away as he vanished beyond the lamplights.—Troy Times.

An elder of the Methodist Conference in Ohio, who was blessed with large feet, related the following at his own expense:

"Stopping one night at the house of a sister, he overheard her in the morning before he arose, instructing her boy to black the elder's boots. Great Improvement in Densistry. Patent Medicines,

HAVING purchased the exclusive right of Dr. Folsom's Improved patent Atmospheric Dental Plates for Tioga County. I now take pleasure in offering it to the public as the greatest DISCOVERY yet made in Mechanical Dentistry. By the use of which, we can overcome any any and all difficulties which have heretofore baffled the skill of the most practical Dentist in the world. Plates constructed upon this plan remain perfectly firm under all circumstances or condition of the mouth, as no air, or particles of foodcan possibly getunderthem. Those having old styles, Gold or Rubber Plates, can, at half the cost, have the Improvement applied to them answering in every respect the same purpose as a new set. Perfect satisfaction guaranteed in every case. C. N. DARTT, Dentist. Wellsboro, Jan. 1, 1869. This is to cortify that we are now using the Improved Dental Plates with perfect satisfiction. Having used the old style of plates for years with all the troubles and inconveniences known in the use of such plates, we cheerfully recommend the improved Plates as far superfor to anything yet known. THIS UNEQUALLED BOOK concerns the property, business, individual rights, and social privileges of every one, and, affords a fund of legal knowledge that to many will make it worth its weight in gold. The simplicity of its instructions, the comprehensiveness of its subject, the accuracy of its details, the facilities afforded in its perfect arrangement, and the consiseness and attractiveness of its style, as well as its cheapness, make it the most desirable of the legal hand-book. No effort or expense had been spared in adapting it theroughly to the times, and affording in it the most recent and useful information.
