Two magic, orbs with watch uncensing, Their glance on all have flung; Two rose-red lips, their merry chattering, tes In bird-like notes have song

Now, o'er those orbs the drowsy lids are closing, Bidding adieu to light; And lips while hands and feet lie still, reposing, Have whispered their "Good-night." O Blessed hour, when soft winged sleep, descend

And gives its sweet repose To toll-worn mortals, all their trouble ending, In sweet, oblivious peace.

For He who guides the sunlight's setting, And gently veils the earth, That deep repose may bring that self-forgetting, Prelude to newer birth,

Will ever guard the tender infant's slumber, And send his angel bands, The midnight watch and dawning hours to num With star-tipped wands.

A Lesson for Farmer Boys.

THE first and main step toward obtaining a competency of ten, twenty, or fifty thousand dollars, is the securing of one thousand: the chief difficulty in getting the one thousand is in obtaining the first hundred and keeping it. Hackneyed as this may appear, it is a fact that is ever new, and one that ever needs to be drummed into the ears of the struggling millions who work hard and look with straining vison, but in vain, for the coming of plentiful days. And especialy does this homely philosophy of wealth need to be emphasized at the present time, and impressed upon the young men of this generation, since the prevalent tendency, now more than ever before, is for beginners in married or business life to adopt such a scale of personal and family expenditure as must render thrift impossible. The youth of our time seem likely to forget that easy circumstances in middle of mature age are, as a rule, only to be purchased at the cost of rigid self-denial in earlier years. The son and daughter are ambitious to begin life where their parents left off-in other words they wish to reap where they have not sown, or before they have sown, and the result is, lives of makeshift anxiety and failure. Most of those who are really. industrious, and yet find themselves at the noon of He with only their daily efforts between their families and want, could have been in more comfortable cfredustances, had they early learned the lesson that the key to a competency lies in the practice of rigid economy at the outset of life. He who does not begin to save when he commences life for himself will DRESS SILKS, FRENCH POPLINS, &c. rarely begin at all, for where not even the nucleus of a modest fortune has been early acquired, family expenses will after a time, grow as fast as the income, and the 'two keep abreast ever every lady can afford a new dress. afterward. Some of the ways in which even a very small sum, actualy saved and put aside in early life, served as a stepping stone to future competence are these: The saving gives the young man the reputation among his neighbors and business associates of being careful, frugal, and prosperous. It gives him what is called a good business credit, it is accepted as an index of his business character, and instead of his being forced to seek employment, opportunities seek him. Besides, his little ready capital enables him to take advantage of business openings which in wholly empty-handed, he could not aspire to.— It enables him soon to become his own employer-a most important consideration. Money begets money. Capital has a natural tendency to increase itself, and a very little capital in the hands of a judicious person, and combined with the labor of strong and skillful hands. is a vast help. The day laborer or the mechanic who has a few hundred dollars in the bank, or invested in a good interest-bearing security, is a capitalist as well as a working-man, and is prepared to reap the advantages of his double capacity.

But mainly, the saving and keeping of the first hundred or the first thousand dollars la thé key to future success, froni the fact that it builds up business character; it compels the formation of habits of economy, and fixes them for life; it puts the young worker on the right road; accustoms him to keeping out of debt, drills him to the homely science of keeping his financial matters , snug, and builds up a granite determination to force expenses below income.—N. E. Homestead.

God Pity Them.

Twelve o'clock at night! All is quiet without, as we peer into the darkness from our office window. How many of our fellow beings are groping their way out there in the darkness? And how suggestive it is of the dreary darkness of life-where there is no ray of light to guide the weary, careworn traveler, as he journeys toward the great hereafter. And how many there are who are thus journeying! Human beings, without hope! Rudderless ships, drifting on in unknown seas! Women and little children "with no one to love, none to carese"—with no home—no friends—and no star to guide them—are plodding their way up the steep hill of adversity, uncared for and unthought of by the great, moving, busy world.—God pity them!

"My son," said a gentleman the other morning to a six-year old urchin, "I wish you to go of an errand to your impossible," was the reply, "I belong to the Highflyer and Tiger ball clubs, and both play a match to-day, the one in the morning and the other in the morning an in the morning and the other in the afternoon. Give me forty cents for a ball.

A bright little four-year-old boy in Detroit, being called to go to bed at an 35,000 ROLLS of WALL PAPER earlier hour than suited his inclination. put the following poser to his mother :

"Yes, my child," was the answer.

"Well, mamma, then why does she them stay up all night? Don't you ink she knows what's right?"

A clergyman once took for his text these words: "The World, the Flesh, and the Devil," and commenced his nanner: "I shal! pass over the flesh, touch lightly upon the world; and hasten on as fast as I can to the devil."
