

Official Returns Members of Congress.
The Harrisburg Telegraph has the official returns from all the Congressional districts in the State, which show a Republican majority of 4,293. The figures in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth, and may be relied upon:

The census shows that Williamsport has a population of 16,000. In 1860, it was 6,664, showing an increase of 10,400 in ten years. Elmira has 15,869; in 1860 she had 5,882, an increase of 7,187.

The election in South Carolina places the delegation in Congress all on the Republican side of the House. A colored man was elected in the Charleston district, over a white Republican. South Carolina seems to be steadfastly Republican.

The citizens of the city of Brotherly Love are not content with the figures of the late census. The population of Philadelphia is set down at 750,000. It was 582,529 in 1860. There is an effort on foot to cause a new enumeration at the expense of the city.

In the Agitator of last week we stated that the taxes on sales, carriages, watches, billiard tables, gold and silver plate, the special tax on legacies and successions, and on gross receipts, would cost the State $1,167,000. We are informed that they expired October 1, 1870. The amount we made was copied from an exchange.

The result of the election in Ohio shows a Republican majority for Secretary of State of 10,720. There was a voter-appeal in the field, for which 2,880 votes were pulled. The majority of Hayes over Pendleton, for Governor, in 1869, was 7,501, showing a Republican gain of 3,219. In this State we had no State officers to elect, and the returns, in great measure, for the want of that organization and work, which must always place Pennsylvania on the side of Protection to Home Industry and of equal rights, by a large majority.

The Republican majority on the Congressional vote at the late election, is 4,293 in this State.

The New York Herald sums up the result of the October elections as follows:—

First—that the people of the United States, by a large majority, accept, endorse and approve the administration of the late President. That the Republican party, as the platform of this administration, is one of a decisive majority. That the popular vote in the Congressional election is one of a similar character. That the Senate being re-elected, both the President and the Senate will be re-elected. That there is no serious danger of a Democratic gain in the November election. That the Democratic party are not so numerous as to be able to carry the country.

The official returns show that we have lost five Representatives and gained one in this State. The districts we lost were close ones, which were carried for the Republicans in 1868 by the importance of general issues and the excitement of a Presidential campaign.

The census shows that we have lost five Representatives and gained one in this State. The districts we lost were close ones, which were carried for the Republicans in 1868 by the importance of general issues and the excitement of a Presidential campaign.

We are indebted to the Pittsburgh Post for the following table showing the result of the census just taken in the Western District of the Federal division of Pennsylvania. It will be seen that our rate of the previous average gain of 88 per centum every decade has been fully kept up.

Table with columns for 1870 and 1860, listing population figures for various counties in Pennsylvania.

Dr. Pratt, of the Corning Journal, has lately been on an excursion to the mining district in this county, in company with sundry other persons from Corning and vicinity. There are many things of interest to be seen about the mines, and the Doctor treats his readers to a column of pleasant reading, as the result of his observations.

We wonder how many thousand persons there are in this county who never took the pains to visit the coal mines in this county. We recall a pleasant ride of four miles, and a walk of five miles, in shady valleys, through the woods, to Arnot, last year, in company with Mr. H. H. Cobb, then editor of the Agitator, and when we returned, we felt like urging every neighbor to go and take his wife to see what capital and industry are doing to develop the latent wealth of Tioga county. Perhaps the mere fact of going has as much to do with the interest of the trip as what one sees. Our people do not go enough. They drive, and drive, and drive—and that is all there is about it, with most of us. Turn out and take a trip, if it is only to look on some distant mountain. It is good even to look upon a mountain one has never seen; for we can make no acquaintance of a thing in nature, but it shall come up upon some morning in eternity and say, "How do you do?" and make us feel that we are not indeed in a land of strangers.

The statement of the public debt for the month of October exhibits the following figures:—
Debt bearing 6 per cent interest..... $1,200,000 00
Debt bearing 3 per cent interest..... 500,000 00
Total bearing interest..... $1,700,000 00
Debt accumulated by Oct. 1, 1870..... 1,800,000 00
Total debt and interest to date..... $3,500,000 00
Accounts in Treasury..... $417,500 00
Debt less than in Treasury, Nov. 1, 1870..... 2,582,500 00
Decrease during past month..... $120,000 00
Total present indebtedness..... $3,462,500 00
Amount of interest paid during the month..... $137,500 00

manner can be accounted for on either reasonably presumption than that which falls heavily upon the leaders of the Republic. More certainly than ever, it makes the contemplation of Paris only a question of time.
A meantime, the dull, slow stage of life in and around France continues. The country for many miles about that city is depopulated of everything which can be made to subsist by the use of the Prussian army, while every day the supplies in Paris grow less. Should that city hold out till the last desperate hour, untold suffering must come upon her two millions of people, unless an early effort be made by neutral powers to supply the necessities of life to her famished people. Bismarck says he will not be able to furnish rations a single day. The country cannot; for France is already laid waste, in many directions, and the cry for food, even now, comes up from the famished provinces. It is a terrible hour for France. The Republic we fear, is scarcely more than a name. Bazaine's treachery, if nothing which preceded, "indicates that there must be opposition to the Republic, which will eventually destroy the last hope. Did not the leaders suffer, there would be little to regret; but the suffering must fall upon the common people. Scarcely will a century relieve them from the effects of this war. And all this because of the inordinate ambition of one man, who dreamed that the name of a dead warrior, who should more properly be called a universal outlaw and merciless murderer, could re-establish him in his waning imperial authority!
Already the new debt of France exceeds our own! Add all the cost on the Prussian side, which all agree France must pay, and how much toil, and misery, and woe, does the gigantic burden represent!
What is needed to put an end to this mad rage of war among civilized nations? It is that the neutral world command peace, and compel a submission of all national misunderstandings to amicable arbitration, without bloodshed. It can be done: it should be done. The great powers of the world should make a law, that no human blood shall be shed in human war, and enforce it. It may be said that the enforcement of the law would make war necessary. No doubt it would; but wars would not be so frequent, or long and wasteful. War is supreme barbarism. It may be long before the glad day when nations shall learn war no more; but the day will come, also, there is not enough divinity in the nature of man to save us from final destruction in a pit of mad contentions, of frantic wars like those of the beasts, and misery untold, and self-inflicted. It is said that an armistice is declared. Let us hope a speedy peace may follow.
