Guide them mother, while you may. Mother! watch the little hand Picking burries by the way. Making houses in the sand, Tossing up the fragrant hay. Never dare the question ask, "Why to me this weary task?" These same little hands may prove

Messengers of light and love.

Mother! watch the little tongue Prattling, eloquent and wild, What is said and what is sung, By the happy, joyous child. Catch the word while yet unspoken, Stop the vow before 'tis broken; The same tongue may yet proclaim Blessing's in a Sariour's name. Mother! watch the little heart Benting soft and warm for you: Wholesome lessons now impart; Keep, O keep that young heart true, Extracting every weed, Sowing good and precious seed : Harvest rich you then may see, Ripening for eternity.

How Alick Shot the Panther.

I am going to tell you a true story of some children I knew when I lived in Texas. Alick was ten years old, Mary was eight, and little Etta was only four. They had lost their father and mother, but had a big brother Frank, and the best sister in the world, Sallie; and she took just as good care of them as their own dear mother could have done, They lived far offin West Texas, on the edge of a wide prairie. Do you know what a prairie is? Just think how it would look if you could see nothing on either side of you but one great field of waving grass and beautiful flowers reaching away, away, far away to where the blue sky seems to bend down and touch it. That is a prairie. Well, brother Frank's fields were on the prairie; but the log-house in which they lived was in the edge of the woods that bordered it.

The trees were not such as you know about. They were live-oaks, which stay green all winter; pecans, which bear the nicest nuts; dogwood, with large white flowers; holly, with glossy leaves and bright red berries; and best of all, the stately mugnolia, which is almost too grand to talk about in a small magazine like this. There was a great magnolia growing by a spring not far from the house; and this was the place where the children liked best to play.

One bright Monday afternoon, they had gone to the spring as usual, to have a nice time, and Sallie was busy making a jacket for Alick, when suddenly the little boy came rushing into the house, and seized his brother's gun which stood in the corner.

"O Alick!" oried Sallie, "how often must you be told not to touch that there is a big panther up in our tree, and I'm bound to shoot him." "But where are Mary and Etta?" "Oh! they are down there looking him right in the eye, so that he may not go off till I get back." He was running with all bis might as he spoke. Poor Salile! her heart seemed to stand still; but it was no time to faint. She caught up the horn with which she used to call Frank to dinner, and blew a blast which she knew he would understand to mean "danger." Then she wrote on the door in large letters, "To the spring quick! and followed Alick with all the speed that love and fear could lend her. The boy reached the spot a little befor her. When she came in sight, there was the frightful beast stretched out on a bough of the tree, growling low, and looking down with flery eyes at the little girls who stood hand in hand gazing steadily up at him, and never thinking of the danger. -Bang, went the gun, and the panther fell to the ground.

Presently Frank arrived. Sallie had sunk down at the foot of the tree, clasping the little girls.

Allick stood looking at his prize and you may be sure he got plenty of ET it be distinctly understood to the inhab-praise; only he was told that he should will soil never again leave his sisters alone in the woods to keep guard over a panther. -The Mursery SUICIDE.—On Friday evening of last week a young man named George Vanderburg, of Honesdale, procured four ounces of laudanum at Lobeck's drug store, on Lackawanna avenue, and before he could be prevented, drank the greater part of it. Medical assistance was at once called, but without avail. He died the next day. This unfortunate case is but another sad commentary on the course of life pursued by too numerous a class of our rising generation. Dissipation, disappointment and mortification, then lunacy, are the inevitable fruits of tampering with vile whiskey. Drinking leads to gambling and all the vile crimes, even to self-murder. Beware of the Glass .-"Touch not, taste not."-Ex.

THE population of San Francisco, as returned by the census takers, is 140,861, which is a gain in the last ten years ,o 94,550. A ourlous feature of the census is the educational statistics. We copy from the Bulletin of October 28:

The generally intelligent character of our population is shown by the fact that there are only 5,867 adults who are unable to read and write. Of this number only nine are native Americaus, and only 2 American women. The classification of the illiterates, according to the nativity, is as follows: Ireland, 4,885; Italy, 258; Mexico 288; Chill, 44; West Indies, 73; England, 29; negroes, 40; Americans, 9; Poland 33; Portugal, 28. Of the totals, 4,297 are females. The Chinese are not included, for all Chinese learn to read and write in their own language. - Press.
