SMITH & BOWEN'S BLOCK.—The large k block on Main street in this village, erceted William H. Smith and John R. Bowen, the esent year, is nearly completed. It is three ories high, and the stories are so high between ints that it presents an imposing appearance m its height alone. There are three stores iron fronts, on the ground, all rented, we ve. The Aguator will occupy a large hall, y 60 feet, in the second story, and there will offices and other rooms there beside. The story is taken up by a halk, 40 by 80, with ige, and dressing rooms, stats and chairs, nded for all purposes—lectures, speeches, exitions, and public meetings of all kinds. Mr. Cone, began the foundation for this perity, and happiness is the wishes of the printers. All through the winter of 1869-70 the work went on, and by spring the walls were up, the roof (which is after the French style) on, and much of the inside work up and read to be put up. Mr. S. M. Broakman, of Elmira, had the work in charge. Mr. Cone made the general plan himself. The Wetmores, of this place, did the brick and mason work. The brick were mostly made by Mr. Cone, though many thousand were purchased of Mr. Margraff, whose brickyard is opposite the cemetery, on Nichols The building is 80 by 110 feet, besides the adalition in rear of the court, for kitchen, bath rooms and closets. It is three stories, of brick. with a Mansard roof, of wood, which is equivaand on the next publication day of Tue Ad- lent to another story. The whole is crowned with a large, symmetrical and nicely finished abprinting business-two years over; a quarter servatory, which adds very much to the appearnce of the house, and makes it conspicuous as you approach the town from any direction. The oof is asbestos, a variety of fibrous horoblende. mineral substance which is said to be fire proof? This is made into a kind of matting, about a ard wide, naited down in strips, and pitched ver with coal tar The finish of the window, and door caps and sills, and of the corners, cor, nice and balconies, (of which latter there are four,) is to represent brown stone. This work adds greatly to the beauty of the building. The vindows and doors are arched, and those in the upper story are tastily capped in wood, finished in stone. The sides of the roof are painted a dark slate color, which contrasts, with a pleasing effect to the eye, with the solid brick below. The halconies are very tastily gotten up; and under those over the main and side entrances, appears the name of the house, very properly christened Cone House," One may travel many a mile and not see a hotel which presents a more symnetrical and pleasing appearance. The work tself speaks volumes in its silence, for the libeality of Mr. Cono; and the manner in which it finished, certainly does great credit to the taste

Upon the ground there are three stores, main ntrance and reading room, in front, with another entrance, a barroom and the ample dining hall, on the Waln street side. The kitchen, pantries, &c., are in the rear of the dining hall, while the ooking is done upon a rauge in the basement. As you open the front door, you enter a broad all, with the reading room on the left, the wide stairway, finished expensively and in good style, n front, the office beyond the stairs, and the arge, arched double door leading to the dining room, still farther on, beside which are the hat rack and wash room, that are to be. The paneling is in chestnut, butternut, ash, birch and hemlock, oiled and varnished. A large furnace

On the second-floor, you find a large parlor, nicely finished and furnished, and on either side of it, halls extending parallel to both streets, and The Presbyterian Sociable will meet at the res-lence of Maj. And here we might say that all the furnithre or the Cone House was manufactured by B. T. Van Horn, of this place, and that it is very ore; ditable to him. Mr. Cone stated publicly, at the opening in honor of Mr. Smith, that he had visited many of the first class establishments in the large cities, and that he could do better with Mr. Van Horn than he could elsewhere. In the third ctory, is the best parler, and across the hall from it, are the bridal chambers. All these rooms are finished and furnished as elegantly as first class rooms in the liest gity hotels. The walls are calcimined, and decorated artistiderations above these: the rising generation | cally with paper hangings. This part of the work is done by J. O. Jacobs, assisted by a young man from the city. In the fourth story, are rooms for transiont visitors, all of them carpeted and comfortably urnished. The halls are carpeted. The plasering is rough and not well finished, in many laces; but it is a good wall, we judge, and looks well till you inspect it closely. From the observatory, one may have views of three most beautiful pastoral landscapes, see all of Wellsboro, and as much of the blue sky, upon a clear day or evening, as the most pensive may But we have not space to particularize farther, The cost of this hotel is over $40,000, finished and furnished. The furniture, carpets, range, furnace and varied articles required will amount to from $12,000 to $15,000. In the house there are 77 sleeping rooms, and all together over 100. Many of them are large and elegantly furnished. The work is now nearly completed, and it gives us pleasure to say, at the close of the year, that no man has ever done more for the lasting benefit of our beautiful village than Mr. Cone, by giving us a hotel which will be a credit to the place HERMAIC LECTURES .- The third lec- | wherever it is known.
