LITTLE BREECHES. . The varied and vivacious Chicago bridune having published a paragraph of some rather humorous import concerning a masculine disguise which a certain female compositor in that city had seen fit to affect, its city editor was recently called upon by the equivocating young lady herself, who, in justiquehanna river, and various streams or fication of that which had been imputed to her, gave the following sketch of

Once more however her old ill for-thence ensued such an exhaustion of her little stock of money, as soon reduiced her to actual distress. For a time she thought of resigning all ambitious schemes of life at once, and entering some family as a servant; but, even upon the verge of this step, it occurred to her to try whether it had been her incapacity or her sex which had so disastrously wrought against her. To make this trial, she pawned all that was left of her more luxurious feminine wardrobe, applied the pecuniary pro. ceeds thereof to the purchase of a masculine ontfit, and, in the appearance of a sprightly, handsome young lad, made renewed overtures for employment.... Now, according to her story, she encountered no difficulty at all in finding and retaining work, was rewarded with a man's wages, and, after earning enough to take her thither, returned to Chicago in August last, and readily obtained an engagement in the office of a daily paper. Elated by this success, and miserably fearful that her sex wo'ld be discovered before she had accimulated a sufficient fund to procure a new feminine wardrobe, and then pay her fare back to her native New England; she spared no pains nor ingenuity to perfect the delusion so precious to her: Buying a razor, she shaved her upper lip day after day, hoping, but in vain, to develope thereby some appearance of a mustache. In prosecution of similar masculine identification, she learned to, and did smoke a pipe, and was ever ready to propitiate her fellow workmen with eigars and small loans of money. Finally, however, one of the printers, who had long suspected the truth in the case, gave the brave girl to understand that her disguise was not perfect, and having persuaded her to take board in The sad news has just reached us the family of his mother and sister, And now, in the proper garments of her sex once more, and probably under

A "Muscular Christian."

The following story is told by the Boston Traveler: Some few years ago a gentleman who was employed as superintendent in a really charitable institution in N York, went into one of the markets of that city and selected a quarter of beef for "home consumption."

"Shall I send it home for you?" ask ed the market man. "No, I thank you, I will carry it my-

The market man regarded him with an incredulous look, and remarked...

What! you carry a whole quarter of beef?' "Yes, sir," was the quiet response. The market man again regarded his sustomer with attention, and no doubt made up his mind that he was overrating his strength. Then he said: "Well, sir, if you will undertake to earry this quarter of meat home yourself, I will give it to you." "Are you serious?"

"I am serious," replied the market "Then," returned the customer, that is the case, just help me to get it on my back, and we'll see if I can't carry it." This was done; and, without let down or rest, the gentleman carried it to the ted, the marketman accompanying pected development of strength and endurance.

On another occasion, the same muscular Christian, having purchased 25 pairs of shoes for the institution under his care, began gathering them together in order to carry them off. "Are you," said the merchant, "gong to earry these home yourself?" "Certainly, I am," was the reply, and if necessary would carry twentyfive pairs more.' The merchant looked thoughtful for moment, and then turning to his

Congregational and responsive worship, engaging all the people, employing not only the ear, but the eyes, the tongue, and appropriate significant attitudes of the body-kneeling in confession and petition; standing up in praise, with frequent singing; and sitting to hear the Word; a worship conformed to the pattern shown in all parts of the Bible; animating the attention by its fitness and variety; in forms of language carefully prepared by the wisdom and fragrant with the piety of ages; gathering up all the sentiments and desires suitable to social and common prayer; avoiding all that might offend reverence, dignity, or a pure taste, and securing a noble and beautiful solemnity. III. In preaching, an adherence to spiritual and permanent subjects, with a reverential treatment of them, by a Ministry in three Orders, ordained according to the apostolic model, customs extending through Christian history, and the personal practice of about seven-eighths of the Christian world.

IV. A system of holy education, training every baptized child to venerate and love his Church as the Mother to whom he belongs by a Divine Covenant in a blessed and joyous inheritance; to heed punctually all the ordinances that are a means of heavenly grace; and to understand clearly the reason of the hope that is in him, as preparatory to the sacred rite of Confirmation. V. A system of Practical Righteousness, connecting all the great interests of life, such as vouth, marriage, home, sickness, death-directly with the influences of the Church as the "Bride of Christ:" teaching the people that every man, woman and child should renfrom six to, eight hundred test high. he is among friends. VII. A general cultivation of the spirit of religious awe, including reverence for sacred times and places, a loyal respect for authority and law, a conservative habit of thought, obedient and gentle manners, and uniformity in ecclesiastical usages throughout Chris tendom. A high degree of spiritual power is ascribed to the two sacraments -Baptism and the Lord's Supper-as-Christ appointed them ;-they are administered and received with signal marks of veneration. Each part of the church building has its peculiar meaning and reasons. The minister, as a priest of God, always appears before the congregation in a robe of his office, the same everywhere, the simplest and plainest possible, "covering up all the changing fashlous of men," obviating all crificism or surprise, and designated by Jehovah as a symbol of purity:

IX. A liberal practice as respects the terms of participation in sacramental privileges, abstinence from pulpit controversy, and a charitable spirit toward the members of all Christian bodies.

X. Christ having established a Visible Kingdom in this world, which is the Church, "the pillar and ground of the Truth," a profound conviction arises that on earth, our religion, like ourselves, must be of two parts inward and outward, life and body, spirit and form, invisible and visible; that Christ Himself has determined certain characters or ordinances by which this Church should be everywhere and always known; and that a recognition of the doctrines of this Church, with a cheerful allegiance to it, is not only estorical orthodoxy, but would provide a remedy for many evils in our present disordered condition .- A Familiar Statement Concerning the Church, by Rt.
