AGRICULTURE. ASPARAGUS.

An epicure has made some discover-les in preparing asparagus for the table that he wishes the world to know about He denounces the practice that some people have of cutting it into small pleces, and pronounces such an act "unwarranted mutilation." He says the stalk should have grown in two days; it will then be exquisitely, tender, of a deep green, with a purple head, glistening in the sun, with the color of the robe of an ancient Roman Consul; it will break as squarely as diamond scrutches glass, and far more easily than a maiden's heaft at the loss of her first lover; its perfume is pungent and agreeable of the earlier of it is one of the most grateful productions of the garden. We clip the following article from "Turf Field and Farm," THE ENGLISH SPARROW.—We do not wish to detract in the slightest degree from the merits of the sober feathered little lellow now so plentiful inour parks and streets, In our city he has about rid us of that pest, the hanging worm, which preyed upon the foliage of our trees, so that in Midsummer, instead of yielding a grateful shade, they tossed limbs bereft of leaves to the winds, and had as well a "sere and wintry" look. But before we citizens are carried away with too great admiration, it would be well to look a little on the other side. Fruit culturists and farmers have something to say as regards our wee friends. We annex the opidion of one of the former to check in some measure the tendency we all are fineness are unsurpassed. leaning toward, that is, of becoming optimists regarding England and all things English: "I called on the best amateur garden-from the fact that the utility of vaccin-ation is being charply questioned. The new remedy is the use of the drug hydrastis canadensis, which has been employed in the treatment of various diseases, both in local and internal administration, and which is said to exert exthaordinary power over small-pox, in modifying the disease, abolishing its distressing symptoms, shortening its course, lessening its danger, and greatly mitigating its consequences. The plant named hydrastis canadensis is found in many parts of the United States, and its tincture is made and sold for medical purposes. The plant is popularly called orange root, and semetimes called yellow puccoon, but it must not be confounded with another plant commonly called puccoon,-Ex.

I may say that I had a neighbor with many currant bushes close to my fence. He in about eight years never gathered sufficient currants to make a tart, and his first the was gathered after my arrival and raid on the small birds.

I only wish any one, who advocates still further legal restrictions to be put on the destruction of small birds, was compelled to try the bractice of his principles in such a garden as mine, with the condition that he could get no ther fruit or vegetables but what he thus produced. To wish a market gardener with a larger buttsimilar garden to have to live from it would be to wish him to starve, or togo to the workhouse.
