Manufacturing Wives. A man of property and utopian proclivities, at Oshkosh, Wis., took it into his head sometime since to adopt and educate a young girl, with the special view of making her his wife. But it was not to be. Shortly before the fixed wedding day a swain eloped with the sylph, and the twain are now one, leaving the utopian lover lamenting .-More than a hundred years ago this crotchet of manufacturing-a wife was tried by the eccentric Thomas Day, the author of "Sandford and Merton."-He took from a foundling hospital two young damsels, each about 12 years of
