GOOD NIGHT.

BY HESTER A. BENEDICT.

Good-night dear friend—I say good-night to thee
Across the moonbeams, tremulous and white,
Bridging all space between us it may be.
Lean low, sweet friend? it is the last good night:

For, lying mute upon my couch, and still,
The fever-flushe vanished from my face,
I heard them whisper softly, "'tis His will;
Angels will give her happier resting-place!"

And so, from sight of tears that fall like rain,
And sound of sobbing smothered close and low,
I turn my white face to the window-pane,
To say Good-Night to thee before I go.

Good-night, good-night! I do not fear the end,
The conflict with the billows dark and high;
And yet, if I could touch thy hand, my friend,
I think it would be easier to die;

If I could feel, through all the quiet waves
Of my deep hair, thy tender breath athrill,
I could go down unto the place of graves
With eyes ashine and pale lips smiling still;

Or it may be that if, through all the strife
And pain of parting, I should hear thy call,
I should come surging back to sweet, sweet life,
And know no mistery of death at all.

It may not be, Good-night, dear friend, good night!
And when you see the violets again,
And hear, through boughs with swollen buds awhite,
The gentle falling of the April rain,

Remember her whose young life held thy name,
With all things holy, in its onward flight,
And turn sometimes from busy haunts of men
To hear again her low Good-night, Good-night!

AGRICULTURE.

THE POTATO—ARE WE TO LOSE IT?

From nearly all parts of the West we have discouraging accounts of the Colorado potato bug. For years he has been quietly but irresistibly working his way eastward, and this year is reported as far east as Erie county, Ohio, and Monroe, Michigan. At this rate, the pest will be here in three years, or less, and when he comes there is an end of the potato, which is one of our best and most reliable crops.

There is no use of trying to beat him by poison, hot water, or flocks of chickens. These may bother his skirmish line a little at first; but when he arrives in force, good bye to the potato, for a time. Perhaps, after he has had his day, he will disappear, though it rather looks now as if he were to become, like Master Paul Dombey, "a permanency." In his moral, physical and political aspects—for he has these—the bug is a little mixed. Morally, he is a discouraging and insurmountable fact to the agriculturist. Physically, he is a nasty, poisonous, sluggish pest. You may collect him by the bushel, and scald or burn him to death; but, if you inhale the fumes of the roasting or steaming insect, you are poisoned dangerously, perhaps fatally. Politically, we are not so sure. Every evil has something in the way of compensation; and a friend writes us from Hutchinson, M'Leod county, Minnesota—a county largely settled by Irish immigrants—that the advent of the potato bug and a local liquor law have reduced the Democratic vote over thirty per cent. in the last two years, in that county.

THE POTATO ONION.—This singular plant is a variety of the common onion, and produces neither flower-stalks nor seeds. Its bulbs grow just below the surface of the ground, somewhat after the manner of the potato, and from this peculiarity it derives it name, potato onion. The place of its origin is not known. It is said, by some authors, to have originated in Egypt, but it is first known to have been cultivated in the south of Scotland.

The preparation of the soil, mode of culture, and storing both the small and the mature bulbs are the same as has been described for other onions. When a full-grown or mature bulb is set in the ground in the spring, it grows and divides usually into five or six, sometimes even twelve, small bulbs, which at the close of the season commonly attain the size of hazel nuts, or one-half or three-forths of an inch in diameter. In very rich alluvial soils some frequently grow quite large, and may be sold in the market, or used for the table. The small tubers are preserved through the winter and reset the next spring. In southern latitudes, where they are not injured by the frost, they are sometimes reset in October. At the end of the season they arrive at their full size, which is about the same as the common varieties, from two and a half to three inches in diameter.

These onions are more hardy than those raised from the seeds, and are rarely attacked by the onion fly. They are, therefore, well adapted to cold climates with short seasons, and to places infested with the onion fly. They are easily raised, a very sure crop, and well fitted for garden culture and family use. Peter Henderson says:

Mr. Hayward, of Rochester, New York, who has cultivated them extensively, says:

They are an excellent variety for table use, good keepers, and, what is still better, a very profitable crop.

In some parts of the country they are cultivated largely as the best onion for the early market. In Bristol, Rhode Island, 20,000 bushels were raised this year for that purpose, 400 bushels being sometimes grown upon an acre. The small bulbs for resetting are frequently sold in the market, and are worth $5 to $10 per bushel.

REMEDY FOR POISON.—A correspondent of the London Literary Gazette, alluding to the numerous cases of death from accidental poisoning, adds:

"I venture to affirm there is scarce even a cottage in this country that does not contain an invaluable, certain, immediate remedy for such events—nothing more than a dessert spoonful of made mustard, mixed in a tumbler of warm water, and drank immediately. It acts as an emetic, is always ready, and may be used in any case where one is required. By making this simple antidote, you may be the means of saving many a fellow creature from an untimely end."

ACTION OF POTASH ON FRUIT TREES.—Dr. George B. Wood, in a late communication to the American Philosophical Society, in Philadelphia, presented the result of certain experiments made by him upon the effect of salts of potassa when applied to grain and fruit-producing soils. In his view, the depreciation of the productiveness of apple, peach, and quince orchards due is to the exhaustion of potash from the soil. Several of such orchards, formerly very valuable, but which had within a few years ceased to bear much fruit, on being treated with an application of wood ashes to the roots of the trees, became completely revived, producing full crops the following year.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

Is widely known as one of the most effectual remedies ever discovered for cleansing the system and purifying the blood. It has stood the test of years, with a constantly growing reputation, based on its intrinsic virtues, and sustained by its remarkable cures. So mild as to be safe and beneficial to children, and yet so searching as to effectually purge out the great corruptions of the blood, such as the scrofulous and syphilitic contamination. Impurities, or diseases that have lurked in the system for years, soon yield to this powerful antidote, and disappear. Hence its wonderful cures, many of which are publicly known, of Scrofula, and all scrofulous diseases, Ulcers, Eruptions, and eruptive disorders of the skin, Tumors, Blotches, Boils, Pimples, Pustules, Sores, St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, and internal Ulcerations of the Uterus, Stomach, and Liver. It also cures other complaints, to which it would not seem especially adapted, such as Dropsy, Dyspepsia, Fits, Neuralgia, Heart Disease, Female Weakness, Debility, and Leucorrhœa, when they are manifestations of the scrofulous poisons.

It is an excellent restorer of health and strength in the Spring. By renewing the appetite and vigor of the digestive organs, it dissipates the depression and listless languor of the season. Even where no disorder appears, people feel better, and live longer, for cleansing the blood. The system moves on with renewed vigor and a new lease of life.
