

THE HUSBANDLY LOVER.
Ab, well! John came to-night, and stood
For full an hour beside the bars;
And so two watched, and the moon shone
The glimmer of the moon and stars.
John asked very shrewdly, "I think
I wish I knew the reason why;
I really thought he meant to say
Something to-night besides good-by."
John's coming here quite often now;
I'm sure I don't know why he should—
Although my sister Jenny says
It's talked about the neighborhood
That he is making love to me—
The strongest thing I ever heard;
For it's true, how queer it is
That John has never said a word.
Ab, well! I shouldn't care so much
If John himself had told me so;
For then he might have said it all,
Upon his own account, you know.
But he's so bashful, I believe
He'll never dare to speak out plain;
I hope he'll master courage up,
And try, when he comes again.
It cannot be that I'm to blame—
I'm sure I've helped him all I could;
I've always met him at the bars,
And talked as any woman would
That had a lover whom she liked,
And walked with her heart aglow,
For him to break the subject first,
And then how quick she'd let him know!
But John, he keeps a coming still,
Just as he has for twelve months past;
I've thought sometimes it looked as though
I'd have to speak myself at last.
I'm bound that he shall know the truth,
And now, resolved, I cannot wait
For him to find it out himself.
And so, next time, I'll try my fate.

AGRICULTURE.

Pot Au Feu—The Pot on the Fire.

There is one mode of preparing food in general use in many parts of Europe, which we should do very well more generally to adopt, that is, "gentle simmering." In every, or almost every, French household there is the pot au feu. This "pot on the fire," after the manner of the old-fashioned "digestor," occupies a quiet little corner of the stove or fire-place. It can hardly be said to boil, but it simmers on gently, very gently, for hours. There it is the receptacle of many a little bone, whether the trimmings of poultry or butcher's meat. It matters not, every little stray fragment of wholesome meat finds its way there. A bit of liver is considered a great improvement, and any vegetables that happen to be about add to its pleasant flavor, whether the tops of celery, Jerusalem artichokes—which, par excellence, make it delicious—or other fresh carrots, turnips, leeks, etc. But, supposing it were to be made altogether of fresh materials—which, indeed, in the France it rarely is—this would be the proper recipe: Put a gallon of water into a pot; put into this either three or four pounds of shin of beef, or any similar thing; add to this an onion or two, or some leeks, carrots or other vegetables, three or four teaspoonfuls of salt, one of black pepper, three cloves; give it one boil up; skim carefully. Now cover the pot and let it cook gently for four hours at the least. Above the fire, throw a wheatsheaf of cold water into it to make it clear. Taste; it may require a little more salt or pepper, according to taste. Pour this soup over toasted crusts of bread. Both soup and meat will be found delicious. The whole secret of this lies in the gentle simmering in a covered vessel whereby the flavor is wholly preserved, and nothing is lost.

Scientific American.

A VERY GOOD WAY.

In answer to a correspondent in Southern Illinois, who wants to know "how to keep hens from setting," a Western editor thus rises and explains:
There are several very good ways. One plan is to make them into pot-pies about seventeen days before they exhibit any such evidence of chicken-heartedness. Another good way is to watch the hen when she begins that peculiar clucking, indicative of a desire to matriculate, wash her in sweet milk, put mustard poultices on her feet, and hang her up by the neck in a dark clothespress for ninety-three or ninety-four hours. Should the demoralized biddy be cut down before the time for setting she will probably set out for some other locality. Another good way would be to read the first act when, if they will not disperse, wallop them gently over the head with a brick, sled-shoe, chunk of stone, for a horse-hoof with the shoe on. After all these devices and contrivances have been applied and fail, if the old hen won't behave herself, why—let her set!

How to Cook Green Corn.

Corn should be allowed to boil, (says the Ohio Farmer,) in clear soft water, and by itself alone. Not in salt and water, for the salt hardens the corn; and not on any account, both the ears of corn with potatoes, as so many do, for this greatly injures the taste and goodness of the corn, and also hardens it.
It is well known that the skin of the potato holds a poison which is freely given to water, rendering it unfit that corn should be boiled in it. Perhaps you will think this unimportant and unnecessary, but I have eaten in hundreds of families where corn was cooked in no other way except with the potatoes, and very much impaired in quality and wholesomeness. I have also seen corn cooked on the cob where meat and vegetables were boiled, and I think that very few are guilty of such a barbarism as that.

Tommy and Tabby Talk.

If a cat does a cat on a garden wall, and if a cat does a cat on a wall, why need they both squall? Every Tommy has his Tabby waiting on the wall, and yet he welcomes her approach by an unearthly yowl. And if a kitten wishes to court upon the garden wall, why don't he sit and sweetly smile, and not stand up and bark, and show his precious back up high, and show his teeth, and mean, as if "twere colic more than love, that made that fellow groan."

Long vs. Short Lamp Wicks.

A correspondent of the Scientific American says:—"Allow me to give your numerous readers the benefit of my experience with long wicks. I crum all the wick that I possibly can into the lamp, fill up the interstices with sponge, and saturate the whole thoroughly with kerosene. I have always found the supply sufficient for the longest winter's night, as long as any oil remains in the wick, the lamp keeps burning. I have had this fairly tested. One of my little ones—a two-year-old—contrived to upset a small table supporting a lamp. With the exception of breaking the glass, no further damage was done, not even soiling the carpet. In fact, my plan was brought about from a similar accident, and a narrow escape from a serious damage. As the wick burns away I keep filling up with sponge, and I think I have the nearest approach to a safety lamp."—Rural New Yorker.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

Is widely known as one of the most effectual remedies ever discovered for cleansing the system and purifying the blood. It has stood the test of years, with a constantly growing reputation, based on its intrinsic virtues, and sustained by its remarkable cures. So mild as to be safe and beneficial to children, and yet so searching as to effectually purge out all great corruptions of the blood, such as the scrofulous and syphilitic contamination. Impurities, or diseases that have lurked in the system for years, soon yield to this powerful antidote, and disappear. Hence its wonderful cures, many of which are publicly known, of Scrofula, and all scrofulous diseases, Ulcers, Eruptions, and eruptive disorders of the skin, Tumors, Boils, Pimples, Pustules, Sores, St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Tetters, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, and internal Ulcerations of the Uterus, Stomach, and Liver. It also cures other complaints, to which it would not seem especially adapted, such as Dropsy, Dyspepsia, Fits, Neuralgia, Heart Disease, Female Weakness, Debility, and Leucorrhoea, when they are manifestations of the scrofulous poison.

It is an excellent restorer of health and strength in the Spring. By renewing the appetite and vigor of the digestive organs, it dissipates the depression and listless languor of the season. Even where no disorder appears, people feel better, and live longer, for cleansing the blood. The system moves on with renewed vigor and a new lease of life.
