Beheld him in the sea! A moment not a voice was heard; But winked the mule his eye, As though to ask to him occurred-"Now how was that for high?"

"Just cut his throat," the captain roared, "And end the cussed brute!" But the noblest soul that perished there Was he who tried to do't!

"Gris" on the Lost Arts, &c.

Wendell Phillips has been going ove the country for twenty years or so, tell ing all about the Lost Arts. If they are lost, how does he come to know s much about them? And if he has found them, why does'nt he restore them to their rightful owners, instead of peddling them around to lyceums at in the country. so much a night?

AIMING AT THE SUN. "Aim at the sun" is a foolish proverb, when you come to look at it. Who but a fool would expect to hit the sun if he did aim at it? Boys are particularly urged to aim their arrows at the sun. We raw a boy weeping one day. He had aimed his arrow at the sun, and the result was, he not only did'nt hit lowest New York quotations mourning because he had'nt fired at FOREIGN DRIED FRUIT, AND ALL the sun, but he lost his arrow. He was the barn door; because if he had miss ed the barn door he might have hit the barn, and he would have saved his arrow. Many individuals fool away their lives in drawing an impracticable bead on the sun, when, if they had aimed at on the sun, when, it they had aimed at afford a botter article at a lesser price than any something within the range of their firm in Western New York. capacities, they might at least have saved their arrows. This may be an arrow view of the matter, but it appears like sense to us.

THE BOOTJACK. . The introduction of the bootjack marks quite an era in the history of civilization, now that we think of it. The savage of course knew nothing of it. and he knows nothing of it now, except when it is hurled at his astonished white brother.

Bootjacks come in shortly after the introduction of tight boots, Before that time men used to kick off their boots, or sleep in them. We infer there are few bootjacks in California, from the frequency of the epitaph, "Died in his

Imagine the perplexity and embarrassment of the man who had the temerity to pull on the first pair of tight boots, when he attempted to pull them off again, the bootjack not being invented. How he must have wriggled and twisted and ""cussed," now prying away with the toe of one boot on the heel of the other, the heel slipping off and striking him upon the tenderest part of his shin bone. Again, catching the toe under the other leg, he works raway with the heel in his hand; but all in vain. At length he tries the crotch of a tree, and the thing is done. Any one could invent a bootjack after

Two negroes, bargaining for some land, the price of which was $900, said they only had half so much money.-"Very well," said the land agent, "I'll take $450 down and a mortgage for the balance in one year." The agent again explained but the derivative agent again explained but the derivative agent. again explained, but the darkey could not see it, and disclaimed the ownership of a single "morgitch." The other darkey here came to the rescue, and "'lucidated the pint." Says he, "Sambo, don't you know what a morgitch is? Den I'll tell yer. A morgitch is jes like dis yer: S'pose yer pays der boss yer $450 down; den yer gives yer word on de honor of a nigger dat yer'll pay him de udder $450 in a year. The New York Times says: "Among the thousand and one criticisms of the 'new departure,' it would be difficult to flad a more apt illustration than that given by Senator Sherman, viz: that me resolutions embodying it reminded him of the famous bronze horse at Mi lan-apparently eager to start off in every direction, but really going not any-
