

THE DUST OF A ROSE.
I turn the key in this little door
Of an old-fashioned house,
The water will drip, the floor will glow,
And dreams will come and dreams will go,
Forever.

Oh, friend, if you and I should meet
Beneath the bough of the budding rose,
And you in the same low voice repeat
The tender words of the old love rhyme,
It could not bring back the same old time,
No, never.

When you laid this rose against my brow,
For the future was to the eyes of men,
With my trusting heart, I am wiser now,
So I smile, remembering my heart throbs;
The dust of a rose cannot blossom again,
No, never.

The dew that you pressed has colder grown,
And hearts will change—I suppose they must;
Aches to be lasting must bloom in stone,
Asks to ashes and dust to dust;
Dust are the roses—the love—and the trust,
Forever.

AGRICULTURE.
FARMERS CLUBS.
BY ALEXANDER HYDE.

This is the season for the organization of farmers' clubs, an institution which we look upon as promising more for the future of American agriculture than the costly and ostentatious cattle-shows, which too generally have degenerated into mere amusement. We have been familiar for many years with the workings of the club, and the shows, and have studied their results with some care; and do not hesitate to pronounce in favor of the club, as having a more educating influence on the farmer and producing greater results on the farm. We do not wish to be understood as opposing cattle-shows, and fairs.—They have done the farmer and manufacturer a great service. Since Elkanah Watson exhibited a merino buck and ewe in 1807, under the big elm on the common in Pittsfield, Mass., and there laid the foundation of the Berkshire Agricultural Society, and incidentally of woolen manufactures, the stimulants given to agriculture by the County and State societies that have been modeled after the old Berkshire has been so obvious that no one can fail to see and appreciate it. The annual exhibition of the best stock and the best products of the farm, the loom, and the machinery must have an educating effect on the farmer and mechanics who assemble to witness the display. Education may not be the object of the farmer's and mechanic's coming together, but the inspection of good stock and improved machinery must have an educating influence, whether they intend it or not. This club brings the farmers together to study and bring into contact with mind, and thus sharpen and polish. The life of the farmer is peculiarly an isolate one. He does not come in contact with his fellow-men enough; and, consequently, is apt to be a little slow to his manners, and a little slow to say rusty, in his mental operations. Let them meet once a week or once a fortnight during the long winter evenings, and discuss any general topic, and it is wonderful to notice how much more active their minds become, and what an influence the discussions have on their farm management. Two heads are always wiser than one, and three heads are wiser than two. A man who seldom or never compares notes with his neighbors is apt to become conceited—to think that he knows it all, and that wisdom will die with him; that he has the best stock, the best mode of cultivation, and the best crops. But let him come into a farmers' club, and the conceit will be taken out of him. He will find that others know a thing or two, and that in some matters are altogether his superiors; and, if he is not such a fool that his conceit cannot be pounded out, he will learn something, and be stimulated to make improvements.

Another advantage of the club is, that farmers will not only learn to think, but learn to talk. It is one thing to think, and another to be able to express our thoughts in clear, concise, and intelligent language. Farmers are good thinkers, but are proverbially poor talkers, simply because they have little practice. In a club composed of their neighbors, where the subject of talk is one with which they are familiar, they learn to open their mouths and express themselves with clearness and force. In this respect the club does for farmers what the lyceum does for lawyers; and it is an advantage not to be lightly esteemed by those who wish to see the agricultural community exerting its due share of influence in society. This capacity for talking exerts a reflex influence on thought; for in no position is a man's mind more active than when he rises to speak before an assemblage of his fellow-men. The facilities are not paid through fear, his thoughts glide now in this direction, now in that, as rapidly and gracefully as a skilled skater moves over smooth ice, and with as little apparent effort. But this skill comes only by practice. The skater makes awkward movements when he makes his first attempts.

Good neighbors are promoted by the farmers' club. When men work alone all day and stay at home all the evening their sympathies with their neighbors have little opportunity for play, and they are apt to become selfish, sometimes even to cherish a pretty morbid jealousy. But let them meet in the club, talk over their successes and failures, and see how well they will be drawn to ward each other, and good emulation will be excited, and they will learn to rejoice in each other's welfare.

We speak of what we have seen when we talk of farmers' clubs. For more than a dozen years we have been connected with one, and have noticed its effects. The agriculture of the community has greatly improved, the thoroughbred stock and more perfect farm implements have been introduced, the brains as well as the farms of the members of the club have been cultivated, and when one of the number has been sick all have been ready to render a helping hand, and when one has died the widow and orphans have not been neglected.

The organization of a club need not be complicated. The more simple the better. A president and secretary, if they are live men, are all the officers required; and these officers should rotate annually, and be considered worthy of the ambition of the farmer as the presidency of the county agricultural society, and the honor of being held in one central place, or circulate from house to house. The latter is preferable, as it gives an opportunity to examine the farms and stock of the members, but is liable to this objection, that the ladies are wont to overdo in the matter of hospitality. Let every member feel that the success of the club will depend upon his individual efforts, and it will succeed, no matter what may be the form of organization.

Incorporated Feb'y 23, 1867.
Char'td Capital $500,000.
Assets over $1,000,000

Stock and Mutual, combining Security with Profit. Suppose you are already insured in a first-class company, and from any cause whatsoever, (say after ten years) you find that you cannot pay longer and die—your insurance is gone and your money wasted. Now, if you take "Hand-in-Hand," you will have the best of both worlds.

This company which ranks among the most popular and successful Life Insurance Companies in the world, collects on all desirable plans, both with and without profit.

Traveling Privileges unrestricted. All policies are incontestable after one year from any of the ordinary causes.

Look to your life insurance. These companies are the only ones that will pay you in full, if you die. While we are constantly assisting our clients in the soundness and stability of their policies, we also present to the following for the inspection of those desiring to insure.

The following companies, compare the annual premiums charged by each for an insurance on life at the age of 30 years, payable at death:

Company	Annual premium for life
Travelers	$16.84
Home	$22.50
Equitable	$22.70
Washington	$22.70
Hand-in-Hand	$16.84

If not satisfied with these policies, write to the best Mutual Company in the United States, March, 1, 1871-y.

Ayer's Hair Vigor,
For restoring to Gray Hair its natural Vitality and Color.

A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual in preserving the hair. It soon restores faded or gray hair to its original color, with the gloss and freedom of youth. Thin hair, thickened, falling, just checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed; but such as remain can be saved by its application, and stimulated into activity, so that a new growth of hair is produced. Instead of fouling the hair with a pesty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray, or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. The restoration of vitality it gives to the scalp arrests and prevents the formation of dandruff, which is often so uncleanly and offensive. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can be used with safety, and is wanted merely for a HAIR DRESSING, nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich, glossy lustre, and a grateful perfume.
