DON'T VOTE FOR PALMER -- ROOSEVELT

On the way from the station to the hall the general remark was made that the Colonel seemed all right, and at the station, where it took twelve railroad policemen to hold back the crowd he pushed his way as vigorously as ever. And he had his smile with him as the great crowds that cheered him at every street corner discovered. Several times while on the way to the hall he leaned out to speak to some more vociferous admirer, but the music of the Municipal band, which headed the procession of automobiles, drowned what the Colonel was saying.

Turns Attack on Penrose
The Colonel had some of the same old 1912 punch in his remarks, and that is what the crowd wanted. When Mr. Pinchot, at the end of his remarks, said:

"I make way for the man who is the most prominent figure in the whole world." Colonel Roosevelt jumped to his feet and announced that he was full of fight and aggressive as a starling. Then the cheering burst forth afresh and it was some minutes before he could begin. He waved his hand for silence, and began with "Mr. Chairman," to the venerable blind statesman, former Senator A. F. Thompson, of Lykens, who presided. "and you men and women of Harrisburg. It is a matter of pride for me to come here to speak to you to-day in behalf of Mr. Pinchot."

He said he owed much to Pennsylvania both for standing by him at the primary and general elections two years ago, and he would try to make his friends feel no sense of shame in standing by him.

"I am here to speak for Pinchot, McCormick and the entire Washington party ticket," he said. Then he turned his batteries against Penrose. In New York, he said, instead of one big boss they have two and each beats the people to vote against the other.

"They put up puppets," he shouted, "but, praise the Lord, Penrose has put up himself. (Laughter.)

"It is distressing to me," he said, "that after four years, since Penrose's character was laid bare, men who claim to be respectable should set an example by supporting him." Then he raised his hand and said in a loud voice:

"Penrose promises prosperity. He is the sorest foe of prosperity. If there is one man who lacks a job, it is Penrose," and again the crowd laughed. "He threw this country into the hands of the Democrats with his eyes open, because he preferred it rather than see an honest man win."

"Penrose promises prosperity—he never keeps his promises. What kind of prosperity would you get at the hands of Penrose? He is the type of prosperity that comes to a city with a red-light smell. I am against Penrose. I saw in a Republican paper to-day that I am not against Penrose—that I am only hitting him love pats. If they call these love pats they are welcome to them. I never hit soft."

Then the Colonel turned his attention to the gubernatorial nominee, Dr. Brumbaugh, who, he said, was Penrose's stalking horse.

"I'm for McCormick," he shouted the Colonel, and once more the crowd went wild with cheering.

"Brumbaugh is running on the Personal Liberty ticket, but he says he is against its principles," said the Colonel, and a cynical smile crept over his face. "He said he didn't know that party or its principles, but it took him a month to find out after he was nominated and too late to get off the ticket. If he didn't know all about it, he is too innocent—he is a woolly lamb not to be trusted out at night. If that's his state of mind, he would ruin himself and his party if he got into the State government. Brumbaugh is led along by the three soiled children—Penrose, McNichol and Vare. The three joined and nominated the woolly lamb, and once they get him in public life they will shear him short and divide the fleece among them."

"Do Not Vote for Palmer"
"And so I ask you to support McCormick. He is not a man who has been opposed in national politics, but here in this State I know he will do right. I ask Democrats and Washington party men to support him and Pinchot. The liquor men have gone to Penrose. Temperance men are supporting Pinchot because he is the man to lick Penrose. Do not vote for Palmer. If you vote for Palmer, you throw your vote away. A vote for Palmer is half a vote for Penrose."

Here the Colonel halted and looked around. "How much time have I?" he asked as he looked at his watch. Being assured that he was on time, he resumed. He took up the workmen's compensation law and told how such a law had accomplished much good in New York, but said that in Pennsylvania a similar law had been smothered to death by Senator Crow, who is now the Republican State chairman working for the election of Penrose.

"Occasionally I hear that my people are going back to the old party," said the Colonel, but I think you will find that we gain for every one we lose."

Just before he ended his speech he raised his hand and hammered home each word:

Hurries Away From Meeting
"You men of Pennsylvania stand together and drive Penrose and Penroseism once for all out of the political life of Pennsylvania. Good-by."

It was only an instant and the Colonel, not waiting to thank his hands with a "dash down the steps from the stage, followed by such of the committee as could keep up with him, and was out on the street and into his auto on the way to the Board of Trade hall. This was the signal for adjournment and the vast crowd left the hall quietly.

Previous to the arrival of Colonel Roosevelt the crowd listened to a prayer from the Rev. Dr. Yates, followed by an appeal for Washington party campaign funds, and then former Senator Thompson, the blind Senator from Lykens, who presided, made an address. Wilmer Crow, candidate for Assembly, made a speech, as did James W. Barker, candidate for Assembly; Dr. Joseph W. Kreider, candidate for Congress, and W. W. Lenker, candidate for Assembly. While Mr. Lenker was pouring hot shot into the Republicans the commotion at the door admonished him that the Colonel was coming and he retired.

Addresses Second Meeting
Colonel Roosevelt went to the Board of Trade hall as soon as his Chestnut street hall address was finished. The auditorium was filled and standing room on both the floor and the gallery was all taken, there being an estimated crowd of nearly a thousand. Many women were in the crowd. Many more persons were on the outside hoping for a speech from the balcony at the front of the building, but the time was so limited that but a few minutes elapsed between the close of the Colonel's speech and his boarding of the train in the Pennsylvania railroad station, on the way to New York.

In the main the Colonel repeated his Chestnut street hall speech to the Board of Trade audience. Toward the close of his remarks when time was growing short and he had been reminding that train-time was fast approaching, he said:

"Penrose is under no delusion as to who his friends are. There is a bi-partisan unanimity behind him. Make it a non-partisan fight against him. Penrose stands for crooked prosperity for a few, while Pinchot stands for honest prosperity for many."

"Dr. Brumbaugh has been a most respectable man in the past and bears an excellent character as an educator. He is nothing more than a starling for Penrose in the campaign and I earnestly ask your support for McCormick."

Colonel Roosevelt spoke on his friendship for Pinchot and the latter's record in the fight for conservation of timber lands and water power throughout the country. He ended with an appeal to vote for the entire Washington party ticket.

The Rev. Harry F. Hoover, pastor of the Middletown Church of God, was chairman of the Board of Trade meeting. It was opened by a prayer by the Rev. Dr. W. H. Stanford, of this city, bishop of the United Evangelical church. Bishop Stanford later spoke while a collection to pay for the hall was taken up.

Applaud Name of Kunkel
The first speaker was Wilmer Crow, candidate for Assembly from the city district. He spoke of Washington party principles and ended with an appeal for votes for Judge George Kunkel, Dauphin county's candidate for the Supreme Court Bench.

"He stands in fear of no man and has shown a strength of character which will elect him without a doubt," said Mr. Crow. There was much applause.

James W. Barker, candidate for Assembly from the city district, and Dr. John H. Kreider, candidate for Congress, spoke before Gifford Pinchot, Washington party candidate for United States Senate, was ushered into the hall.

Mr. Pinchot said there has been a turning of the tide toward the Washington party since Colonel Roosevelt's invasion of the State. He said the small politicians of Philadelphia were coming around to his office shaking hands these days, evidently trying to find a soft place to light on—rats leaving a ship are the first indication that it is going to sink."

Lex M. Mitchell, Washington party candidate for Congress-at-large, filled in the time between Mr. Pinchot's speech and Colonel Roosevelt's. He advocated a tariff schedule made by a non-partisan board of business experts.

The Colonel's Departure
The crowd waited while the Colonel and his party got out of the hall. There were fully five hundred persons outside when he went to his machine and the way for him was cleared in a clearing for his automobile, decorated with small American flags, swiftly bore him to the Pennsylvania station where railroad police escorted him to his special in the main shed. The Colonel entered his car and did not emerge again. A large crowd was disappointed that the Colonel did not waive a departing "good-bye."

E. A. Van Valkenburg, editor and owner of the Philadelphia "North American," joined Colonel Roosevelt in his special car, just before the train pulled out. This was Colonel Roosevelt's last scheduled stop before leaving the State. He went to Philadelphia in his special, his Harrisburg speeches ending a whirlwind campaign of four days.

Colonel Roosevelt was characteristically attired in his army overcoat and his black soft felt hat. It is very likely the same hat he threw into the ring in 1912.

REBEL OUTBREAK IN PORT AU PRINCE

Landing of Haiti President's Brother Signal for Serious Revolutionary Disturbance

MINISTRY FLEES TO CONSULATES

Government Forces Oppose the Rebels but Are Driven Back and Compelled to Evacuate Their Positions—American Cruiser at Gape Haitien

Port au Prince, Haiti, Oct. 29.—A serious revolutionary outbreak occurred in Port au Prince last night as a result of the landing here of Charles Zamor, a brother of the president of the republic.

There was shooting in the streets of the city throughout the night and the encounters continued to-day. The members of the ministry have taken refuge in the foreign consulates.

The Netherlands steamer Prinz Willem came into Port au Prince yesterday evening at 10 o'clock. On board were President Zamor and his brother Charles. Charles came ashore, and his landing was the signal for the outbreak. The government forces opposed the rebels but were driven back and compelled to evacuate their positions.

A force of rebels, under Davilmar Theodore, leader of the present rebellion and the man who has been proclaimed President by the revolutionists, has occupied Mirabalais, 30 miles northeast of Port au Prince, and is now marching on this city.

The present revolution in Haiti has been going on since the United States recognized the government set up last winter by President Zamor.

Reports from Port au Prince, under date of October 23, set forth that the President, defeated by the rebels, had withdrawn to Gonaves and gave the composition of the new government under Davilmar Theodore.

The American cruiser Tacoma is at Cape Haitien and American marines were landed in that city about a week ago to protect the American consulate after an understanding with both the Haitian factions.

WHOLESALE FOOD FOR ARMY

Special Order Issued to Officers and Chiefs in U. S. Bureau by Associated Press.

Washington, Oct. 29.—Efforts of purchasing officers of the Navy to secure only the most wholesome food for the enlisted men, are revealed in a special order which Paymaster General McGowan has issued to the officers and chiefs in his bureau. In it he declares that "our men are no 'poison squad' but human beings and American citizens for whom we stand in the relation of trustee insofar as relates to the question food."

He says that "every effort to try on the navy any experiments or tests of food product whatever shall be promptly suppressed," as the enlisted men have no choice as to what they shall eat and because adequate and satisfactory subsistence is the very foundation not only of real efficiency but of discipline itself, there is no class of purchases for the naval services," he says, "that need to be more constantly watched than provisions."

The Harrisburg Hospital is open daily except Sunday, between 1 and 2 o'clock p. m. for dispensing medical advice and prescriptions to those unable to pay for them.

GERMAN CRUISER EMDEN, DISGUISED, SINKS RUSSIAN AND FRENCH VESSELS

of the last few days to the fact that the opposing armies have been unduly exhausted by incessant fighting by day and night and perforce relaxed their efforts. There is no indication, however, that Germany intends to abandon the fight for possession of the North Sea coast. Unofficial reports have it that reinforcements are being poured in from every part along the battle line where they can be spared. In the opinion of military critics the outcome of this battle, the severest open fighting of the war, may determine whether it is possible for exposed columns of infantry to stand up against modern instruments of war such as the machine gun.

To the south and east along the battle line across France successes are reported by the French to the south of Arras, between the Aisne and the Argonne and in the forest of Apremont. None of the German attacks, it is said, have been successful.

The German cruiser Emden, whose remarkable exploits have fairly earned a place in history, is reported to have performed the most daring feat of all. Disguised with a fourth smokestack, presumably taken from some captured vessel, and flying the Japanese flag, the Emden is said to have sailed boldly into the waters of Penang, a British possession in the Straits Settlement, and to have sunk a Russian cruiser and a French destroyer. The Emden was reported yesterday to have sent to the bottom a small Japanese steamer.

A long list of losses on the sea continue to grow. Another steamer is reported to have been sunk off the North coast of Ireland. Off Cuxhaven a Swedish steamer was destroyed by a mine with the loss of five men.

No further word was received from South Africa, although England's anxiety was relieved by the official statement last night that General Louis Botha, commander-in-chief of the Union of South African forces, met promptly and effectively the emergency presented by the new rebellion. He was said to have put to route the forces under General Christian Beyers. No word has yet been received, however, concerning the activities of General Christian De Wet, the noted Boer general who has also taken the field.
