THE NEW WAY OF PAYING FOREIGN DEBT

(Copyright, 1914, by C. M. Keys, New York.)

One of the big bugbears of this war has been the amount of money owed by the people of the United States to the people of Europe. When the war broke out and all shipping was interrupted, various experts figured this debt at $200,000,000 to $300,000,000. Theoretically it had to be paid in gold, and a great many men spent a lot of time deploring this grim necessity, which seemed likely to bring about an exhaustion of American credit by withdrawing the basis of that credit from circulation and deposit.

The thing that actually happened was something quite different. If the German, French and British ships had been scattered all over the world in large units and if every ship that sailed from New York or New Orleans for Europe had been in any serious danger of being captured during the months of October and November, the thing that the experts feared might have happened, for it is not likely that the debtors of this side of the ocean would have been able to hold the creditors of the other side at arm's length for a long period by refusing to pay their debts. Because the great German fleet retired behind the defenses at Wilhelmshaven and Kiel, and because the scattered cruisers of that nation found it expedient to avoid the main lines between America and Europe, quite a different thing came to pass. The main highway of commerce being almost wide open between England and America, the European creditors of this country found their debts paid in quite a different way.

In October merchants and commission men in this country shipped to Europe something like $200,000,000 worth of wheat and a smaller amount of corn. In addition, concerns that were able to furnish socks, shirts, cotton duck, barbed wire and a dozen other products needed for armies in the field, found an immediate market in Europe and shipped their goods on rush orders through the open lanes of the Atlantic. Imports from Europe, on the other hand, fell off very greatly, the decline in the imports from Germany alone being something over $20,000,000.

Thus in a single month the tables were turned very quickly and our debt to Europe, which had looked so threatening and enormous, began to dwindle very rapidly. This process of shrinkage in the foreign debt is proceeding even more rapidly at the time this is written and seems likely to keep on proceeding for quite a long time to come. Some of the orders reported are tremendously big orders. The average, however, for instance, of an order for ordnance which would run into many millions of dollars. A similar condition exists with respect to powder and other high explosives. An airplane company, which in July was employing 120 hands, is now employing over 1,000, and is working day and night. Its shipments, if all its orders can be filled in the next six months, will wipe out more than $2,000,000 of our debt to Europe.

More prosaic, but steadier than the shipment of actual war supplies of clothing, blankets and cotton duck are the principal textiles in which trade seems to be likely on a large scale, but there also seem to be pending some big contracts for uniforms as well as for uniform cloth and much has been heard of gigantic orders for shirts and underwear placed with houses in the Middle West. In shoes something like 3,500,000 pairs are reported to have been ordered, and the average price per pair is somewhere between $3 and $4. Such an extraordinary episode speaks for itself.

In provisions, the demand seems to be unlimited. One hears of an order placed in Oklahoma City for 15,000,000 pounds of canned meats; and of other orders even larger reported in the trade as pending, and sometimes even as placed without full price being given. It would appear, in fact, from all the reports, as though every pound of foodstuffs that can be placed upon the American markets for many months to come, would be taken at good prices by the foreign buyers.

The experts are now engaged in revising their figures. Instead of dwelling upon the enormous balance due to Europe, they are spending more time figuring how long it will take at the present rate of export, as compared with the present rate of import, to wipe out our debt to Europe altogether, and to place the shoe upon the other
