SLEIGHING IN ERIE COUNTY

Sport Was Fine There a Few Days Ago. Water Commission Learns Some unusual conditions of climate and streams have prevailed in Pennsylvania during the last week, as shown by the reports of the State Water Supply Commission, from its stream gaging stations.

At Williamsport, where the West branch of the Susquehanna river is 1,000 feet wide, it was frozen over, but is now partly open. All the way up the West branch there are intermittent stretches of frozen and open water. On the Driftwood branch of the Sinnemauchung creek, one of the large tributaries of the West branch, there is snow and ice. Most of the other tributaries were frozen but some are now open.

On the North branch of the Susquehanna, the main river has slush ice, while some of the tributaries have been frozen, but are now mostly open. In that section of the State, Tankhannock creek was probably hit the hardest with the cold snap, where there are two inches of snow and the stream is frozen three-quarters of an inch thick.

On the Ohio watershed the main rivers, including the Allegheny, Monongahela and Youghiogheny rivers have had slush ice, while some of the tributaries have been closed tight. In the eastern part of Erie county on the North branch of French creek, the stream has been frozen and good sleighing existed a few days ago. Southwest of this point, near the center of the State, on Clearfield creek, at Dime-ling, ice conditions have prevailed and the thermometer registered eight degrees below zero.

On Tionesta creek, in Forest county, a large tributary of the Allegheny, there is snow and ice. Slippery Rock and Connoquessing creeks, large tributaries of the Beaver, are frozen over in some places.

FEET BETRAYED HER

Happy Dawn Nearly Fooled Broadway in Man's Evening Clothes. New York, Dec. 2.—Wearing a long overcoat over evening clothes, topped with a brown soft hat tilted in rakish fashion, a young man walked south on Broad last night. So innocing was his gait that Patrolman Picked stopped him at Forty-seventh street and asked: "Are you a man or woman?" The patrolman then noticed tiny feet peeping from under the trousers and said: "I think I had better take you to the station house. Come along."

PAID HIGH FOR YOUR TURKEY?

Well, Cheer Up—It Was All Due to a Misunderstanding. Washington, Dec. 2.—The Department of Agriculture issued this statement yesterday. "The turkey industry of the United States has been hit a heavy blow by misunderstanding of the quarantine declared for the foot and mouth disease in cattle, according to poultry experts of the Department of Agriculture."

"Misunderstanding of the quarantine, it is declared, prevented many shipments in some quarters, and caused heavy Thanksgiving shipments in others, demoralizing the market. "Studies of the Thanksgiving turkey markets in New York, Boston and Philadelphia, indicated that turkeys were somewhat scarce, and as a result prices ruled high on a very firm market. All that saved a great scarcity was the fact that there were a quantity of turkeys in excellent condition held over in cold storage from last December. This somewhat relieved the pressure."

The misunderstanding caused many families to go without turkey Thanksgiving, but it has left more turkeys for Christmas. It is predicted that the Christmas turkey will not be as high this year as it was last.
