LOST A $10,000 NECKLACE

Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt Advertises a $500 Reward for Return of Pearls

New York, Dec. 7.—Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, Sr., is advertising for the return of a pearl necklace containing more than 200 stones and valued at $10,000. The loss occurred some days ago, but published announcement was not made until Saturday, when this notice appeared:

"Lost, two strings of pearls with locket; $500 reward and no questions asked if returned to John H. Gleason, No. 20 East Forty-sixth street."

Gleason is a seap specialist, with many rich and well known patrons. Mrs. Vanderbilt lost her necklace on the occasion of a visit to his establishment. Whether the necklace disappeared while she was actually in the Forty-sixth street house, or as she left the building could not be determined last night, when information came to "The World" that it was Mrs. Vanderbilt on whose behalf Gleason was advertising.

At Mrs. Vanderbilt's home, No. 669 Fifth avenue, it was said that since no questions were to be asked regarding the return of the necklace no questions could be answered regarding its loss. It was added that the necklace disappeared "three days ago," but nothing more specific was to be had. Gleason's office was closed yesterday, and he could not be found.

Mrs. Vanderbilt has been back in New York only since November 1, when she returned on the Lusitania after an unusually busy and exciting stay in France.

Once before the loss of some of Mrs. Vanderbilt's jewels—which are among the three finest collections in New York, it is said—attracted attention. This was in 1905, two years after her marriage to Mr. Vanderbilt. A diamond necklace valued at $50,000 was stolen while she was in Florida, on her return from a visit to Cuba. The recovery of the jewels brought about the arrest of a number of employees of the Florida East Coast Railroad.

DEATH ROBBED BOWERY MAN

Dentist Tells of $300,000 Fortune Andrew Comstock Probably Would Have Got

New York, Dec. 7.—If he had lived a short time longer, it is probable Andrew Comstock, the once successful patent lawyer who died penniless last Wednesday in the Bowery lodging house where he had lived thirty years, would have received at least $500,000 earned by his services in a noted lawsuit.

The old man's only two living friends, Samuel J. Burrell, a retired business man of 100 Pierpont street, Brooklyn, and Dr. H. A. Parr, a dentist at 33 West Forty-second street, saw to it yesterday that their old friend's body was cremated, as he wished, and buried in potter's field. It was Dr. Parr who told the story of what might have been.

For twenty years Comstock was attorney for the International Tooth Crown Company, which was trying to establish the legality of its patent on the entire principle of the crown and bridge work now done by dentists throughout the world. This was contested by two dentists' combinations, but after an expenditure of nearly $500,000 the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in 1903 held the patent valid. The patent term had expired meantime and the company was almost insolvent, so the renewal was not pressed, and the company dissolved, leaving only Dr. James E. Low, of Chicago, the inventor.

Dr. Parr was a stockholder in the company and he believes now that Dr. Low, although an old man, intends applying to the Congress which convenes to-day for a renewal of his patent. Since it has been upheld by the courts it would seem that it must be granted, and Dr. Low has prepared documentary evidence to present to Congress. Should Congress grant the patent renewal Dr. Parr says $500,000 is the smallest estimate he could make of what Mr. Comstock could have received in legal fees still due him and from an interest
