Wind and the Sun
Wind does not always go down with the sun, but may blow from high to low after sunset. If wind starts to fill up a low pressure area before sunset it is liable to keep pouring in until it is filled and equilibrium restored. If wind stops exactly at instant of sunset one may rest assured that the area of barometrical depression is filled. If wind blows from sea to land by day it may stop at sunset and reverse direction. If it does the cause is that at sunrise the sun's radiant energy heats the land more than it does the water. The land warms the air, increases its rarity and it rises, producing a lower pressure area, and cooler air from over the ocean rushes in to fill it. After sunset land cools in less time than the water, and the direction of flow is reversed. But this may not always occur. Local causes, as fog, saturation of air, electrical conditions and others may prevent.—New York Journal.

Doughty Berbers
The ancient Berbers, who still live in the mountain territory of Kabylia, were never conquered by Roman, Goth, Vandal, Arab or Turk. They made their first obeisance before the firearms of the French under the second empire. Through all these millenniums they have lived in the tops of steep hills. Around them in all directions is a zone of trees, with pasture above, beginning at about 3,000 feet, and the oft-quoted open valleys below. Here for unknown ages the Berber has lived among and from his trees. There are four staples of life in Kabylia—dried figs, olives, bread and meat. For miles there is one unending succession of villages set in this open forest of figs and olives.—Argonaut.

TOWN HELPLESS WHILE UNDER FIRE

Scarborough Recovers From the Unexpected Bombardment by the German Squadron

FEELING ONE OF BITTER ANGER

Big Resort Hotels on Esplanade Tempting Targets for Rain of Shrapnel and Lyddite Shells—Woman Literally Blown to Pieces

Scarborough, Via London, Dec. 17, 8.15 A. M.—The Queen of English Watering Places has recovered to-day from the unexpected bombardment and the feeling is one of bitter anger at the town's helplessness when under the guns of the German squadron.

The first warning sound of distant firing, which attracted little attention except from the military authorities, came at 5.30 in the morning. At 8 o'clock three German war craft, which the majority of witnesses agree were one battle cruiser and two lighter cruisers, loomed out of a heavy fog so close underneath the cliffs that they were unable to train their guns on the wireless station on the heights.

Great Damage to Hotels
However the big resort hotels on the esplanade of the old town offered tempting targets and a rain of shrapnel and lyddite shells began to fall in this section, doing great damage to the hotels and destroying houses and shops in the poorer districts. A woman in one of these shops was literally blown to pieces.

One of the light cruisers seemed to be doing most of the firing. First she let go with her stern guns and then, maneuvering further out, devoted her broadsides to the most conspicuous buildings on the higher ground. As the result of this bombardment three shells found a target in the Scarborough hospital, one tearing a chimney from the roof, another striking the nurses' quarters and the third demolishing the ornamental facade above the entrance. The wall of the old castle, which looks formidable, but which has been unoccupied for hundreds of years, was breached by an eight-inch shell.

Residential Section Suffers
The gunners got the correct elevation of the wireless station, but failed to injure it, most of the shells falling in an adjacent field, the turf of which was completely ploughed up by them. Some of the better class of residences began to suffer, one of the first being the home of Russell Rea, member of Parliament for the district. His life and that of his wife were saved by the fact that they had gone down for an early breakfast and were in the kitchen, the only part of the house untouched, the rest being a total wreck. At the same time a small house occupied by a soldier, his wife and their child and nephew was struck by an explosive shell, reducing the place to kindling wood and killing the whole family.

Whole Row of Houses Wrecked
The bombardment had now been on for fifteen minutes and the town was given a five minutes' breathing spell. The streets were cleared of people when the light cruiser, after turning, brought a new broadside into play. The German squadron then faced what looked like a deserted city. The gunners directed their attention to the railroad station, with the result that a whole row of houses, including a church in a nearby street, were wrecked, but without loss of life, as the occupants had sought refuge. This second bombardment was more violent than the first, but did less damage.

Death Pill Envelops People
During the early stage of the bombardment the searching shells caused an indescribable pandemonium. Later the people became still as death under the thunder of the guns which rose to a tumultuous crescendo when the full broadsides were used. When the ships drew off the sad search for killed and wounded began. At the hospital, when the wounded began to arrive, the large entry hall witnessed many pitiable scenes as anxious relatives awaited the results of the surgeon's examination. Among the wounded were many women and children, an infant of four months having its skull fractured by a shrapnel while in its mother's arms, who escaped unscathed. A surgeon at the hospital also had a marvelous escape when the casing of an eight-inch shell burrowed into the ground at his feet.

The military authorities, assisted by the police, directed the exodus of the townspeople from the city. Women were favored with seats on the trains with the result that but few men departed from the town.

Helplessness of Refugees
The pathetic helplessness of the refugees brought home the reality of war to this part of England. Many poor people whose homes were destroyed sought refuge in nearby towns. Crowds of the wretched waited at the station, thinking that the scenes of the morning were about to be re-enacted. One of the first notices posted instructed citizens to bring to the police station all unexploded shells. In accordance with these instructions a policeman brought in a projectile which he had picked up on the street. Examination showed it had not exploded, so it was hastily plunged into a bucket of water.

By nightfall the town bore an outward appearance of calm but anxious groups lingered about the streets. Many of the persons in these groups were unsparring in their expressions of resentment because the town was helpless to retaliate on the raiders.

PREPARING COAST TOWNS OF ENGLAND AGAINST ANY FUTURE GERMAN ATTACKS

London, Dec. 17, 3.28 A. M.—The news of the German raiders' arrival was promptly sent to the military authorities of all coast towns and pre-arranged steps were taken so as to be prepared in case a raid developed at other points. For instance, the Mayor of Tynemouth, on the North sea, eight miles east north-east of New Castle, immediately ordered the gas supply turned off, directed the police to round up a large number of aliens and issued a proclamation and warned the people to remain in doors.

There is much speculation in London as to how far the German raid has succeeded in creating a feeling of uneasiness or panic in other coast towns.

Refugees With Bandaged Wounds
One of the London newspapers telegraphed to the mayors of all coast towns asking them what effect the news of the enemy's visit had had. All replies received so far indicate that no panic is felt.

A number of refugees and travelers arrived in London from the bombarded towns during the night. Some of them showed signs of the raid in bandages covering minor injuries received. A commercial traveler who smoked a cigar on the porch of a hotel at Scarborough throughout the bombardment said:

"Although there was some excitement in the town the attack was over so soon that there was no panic. The guns engaged in the attack were evidently of small calibre as the damage done by each shell was confined to a small area while some the shells merely cut clean, small holes in buildings, passing on harmlessly."

"My hotel was struck by several shells, but nobody was injured. One shell wrecked two rooms, but fortunately neither of them was occupied."

Cool Housewife Tells Story
Another passenger from Scarborough was a cool young housewife who said: "At daybreak I glanced out of my kitchen window and saw three warships lying quietly in the haze a mile or two off shore. It never occurred to me that they were anything but English ships so I went quietly about my preparations for breakfast."

"About 8 o'clock I heard the sound of guns, but paid no particular notice. A few minutes later there came a shock—I cannot think of a better word for it. A shell had struck the house and passed straight through the room I was in."

"I was poaching eggs at that time. I looked up and saw great holes in the walls near the ceiling, indicating the course of the missile. I was puzzled for a moment and then suddenly realized that the Germans were shelling Scarborough."

"I took the family to the cellar, where we remained for an hour, during which one more shell struck the roof and fell into the drawing room, smashing up the furniture. Another shell ploughed up our garden."

WAR OPENS TRADE IN CHINA TO AMERICAN MANUFACTURER
Philadelphia, Dec. 17.—American capital probably will obtain increased opportunities in China as a result of the war, in the opinion of William Barclay Parsons, a consulting engineer, of New York, who spoke last night at the Franklin Institute.

Foreign capital, almost altogether from Europe, hitherto has been applied to the modern developments of China, said Mr. Parsons, who, in 1898 made a survey for the railroad from Hankow to Canton, but the war will cut off the sources of such investments. Accordingly, the field for the American who will find himself free from competition with the investor of other wealthy countries.

More Heat
—from the same amount of coal will prove two things:
1st—that you know your furnace;
2nd—that you know what kind of fuel to feed it.

Are you getting more heat from the same amount of coal? You pay the same price for coal as others, but if you do not get the same results, it's time to talk over your heating troubles with Kelley and to change the furnace's diet to Kelley's Coal.

There's a reason—you'll soon FEEL it—the MORE HEAT.
