FINANCE

DECLINES WERE THE RULE IN STOCK MARKET TO-DAY
Trading Comes Almost to Standstill When Further Details of America's Note to Great Britain Were Received From Washington

New York, Dec. 29 (Wall Street)—Little of yesterday's strength was shown in the early part of to-day's stock market, declines being the rule. Reading, Union Pacific, Amalgamated and several other active issues fell back a point or more with fractional recessions in other parts of the list. Baltimore and Ohio and Mexican Petroleum, the latter with a one point gain, were the only notable exceptions to the drooping tendency which was accompanied by a small output of stocks. U. S. Steel was relatively firmer than other leaders. A moderate rally followed.

Washington advices giving further details of this government's note to Great Britain concerning interference with the American marine commerce, were the subject of general discussion in financial circles and exercised some effect upon the market. Following the early rally prices dropped back slightly after which trading came almost to a standstill. There was no initiative except from the short interest which tested the market from time to time in search of weak spots. Missouri, Kansas and Texas pld. dropped four points to within a fraction of its minimum. Bonds were irregular.

KITTY GORDON IN CLEVER PLAYLET AT THE ORPHEUM

With Aid of a Stage Press Agent She Presents a Pleasing Farce—Keane and Window Are a Team That Stand Out Conspicuously in Bill

The vaudeville enthusiast is the gainer when "stars" go in for the "two-day." None other than Miss Kitty Gordon in "Alma's Return," is the feature of a remarkably good bill at the Orpheum theatre this week.

Miss Gordon's playlet savors a bit of the farcical and is a choice bit of entertainment. It features the work of a press agent.

Miss Gordon as "Mrs. Sutcliffe," a stage beauty returned and in society, desires to go back to the stage, and her press agent capably manages that. Her poor husband has himself arrested with a Broadway chorus girl and of course "Get There Dixon," of the "Eagle," comes around to know when she will sue for a divorce.

It is a clever plot and "Get There Dixon" is a fairly good stage reporter, although his part is overdrawn, like that of every other stage reporter. The big scene takes place in Mrs. Sutcliffe's apartment. She dresses for the stage—in the movies—and then does a specialty. She is capably supported by Harrison Hunter.

There are two excellent "man and girl" teams on the bill. Robert Emmett Keane and Muriel Window, late of the New York Winter Garden, could carry off a hallicion honors on most any vaudeville bill. Chester Spencer and Lou Williams in "Putting It Over," have a comedy skit way above the average. Miss Marie Eline, a juvenile, billed as "The Thanhauser Kid" plays three parts in "The Road to Tomorrow." It is one of the most delightful juvenile acts being played to-day.

Nan Halperin, captivates her audience with her clever rendition of new songs. Her "Play My Wedding March in Synopsizing Rag," is the best number. Paul Gordon walks his way into the audience's favor on a wire, and Papiflux and Paulo tumble into a good deal of applause. They leave a pleasant impression on the minds of the departing crowd.

WOMAN BURNED TO DEATH

Though Paralyzed, She Crawls to Window and Beats on Pane.
New York, Dec. 29.—Mrs. Eliza Worm, 70, a paralytic, was alone in the sitting room of her home on the ground floor of a frame dwelling at No. 1832 Belmont avenue, the Bronx, last night when her daughter, Mrs. Eliza Rothberg, came in with the evening paper and, placing a large Christmas candle on a table at her mother's elbow, handed her the paper. As the daughter left the room and closed the door the lock snapped shut.

A few minutes later persons living in Arthur avenue saw from their rear windows the paralytic in flames. She managed to throw herself from the chair and crawl to the window and beat on the glass.

Joseph McGarry, a fireman of Truck Company No. 22, in Arthur avenue, broke down the door, but Mrs. Worm had been burned to death. The firemen put out the blaze before it spread to other parts of the house.

The woman's husband, Nelson Worm, arrived home soon after the firemen carried out the body.

ENGLAND IS LIABLE FOR BIG DAMAGES

Effect On Other Neutrals

In view of the important principles laid down in the note it was expected to have a far-reaching effect on the attitude of other neutral countries toward the general subject of contraband. Some diplomats thought it might hasten the calling of the conference of neutrals proposed by Venezuela to revise rules of international law for the protection of neutral commerce.

The note was not the result, it is understood, of any particular violation by Great Britain of the British government's commerce rights, but was intended as a protest against the general attitude of the British government to which France has practically adhered in the treatment of neutral cargoes.

Uncle Sam Was Patient.
The document points out that the United States was patient in the early days of hostilities, believing that the war had burdened the British foreign office with serious problems. It declares that with the passing of five months, however, the situation has grown worse.

Administration officials realize that many millions of dollars in claims are accumulating against the British government but the note sets forth that reimbursements alone do not cure the evil, as American shippers are practically intimidated and fear to embark on legitimate export trade.

The American note declares the relations between neutral countries are those of peace and normal times, not of war. The words "absolute" or "conditional" contraband, in the view of the American government, therefore, should not exist. The United States insists that the facts proving that a hostile destination is intended must be shown at the time of a vessel's seizure. It claims that the presumption of guilt should not rest on the shipper in neutral commerce, but that the burden of proof should be placed on the belligerent. Similarly, a cargo consigned "to order," that is sent to no specific consignee in a neutral country, is not of itself a suspicious circumstance, according to the contention of the American note.

The Right of Search

The American government maintains that the belligerent may exercise the right of search, but cannot divert a neutral ship to a belligerent port for further examination unless proof is shown at the time of detention of a hostile destination of the cargo.

One of the most far-reaching points in the note is the attitude toward absolute and conditional contraband destined to belligerent countries. The American government argues that the belligerent must prove conditional contraband is destined for use by the army or navy of its enemy. In view of this position, further direct to belligerents, the American government insists that there should be no interference with foodstuffs and products of the same class consigned to neutral countries.

Note Couched in Friendly Tone

The communication is couched in a friendly tone, setting forth that the United States wishes to speak in terms of frankness lest its silence be misinterpreted as an acquiescence in the British policy, which, it says, is arousing public feeling in this country on every side. It refers to the cordial relations existing between Great Britain and the United States, but declares the British policy with regard to neutral commerce is held in many quarters in the United States as directly responsible for the depression in American industries.

A reply is not expected for several days, as the note probably will be considered at length.

LATE WAR NEWS SUMMARY

various points. The French statement says that the allies have captured the Belgian town of St. Georges, around which heavy encounters have been in progress for some time.

Another striking change in the military situation in the east, where neither of the contending forces has been able to keep the ascendancy for any considerable period, is indicated in dispatches from Petrograd and Vienna. On this occasion the Russians appear to have won the upper hand.

The Petrograd war office states that the Germans who have been pressing forward in Poland have been repulsed with heavy losses. In Galicia the Austrians are reported to have suffered a complete reversal and to be retreating hastily. Their defeat apparently breaks up the maneuver aiming at a combined Austro-German attack on the southern forces of the Russians, which if successful might have imperiled the Russian left wing. Berlin, however, views the situation in the east with optimism, intimating that important developments in Poland may be expected shortly.

CHANGING OF THE BANKING SYSTEM

Comptroller Williams Submits His Annual Report to Congress on Financial Conditions

NEW LEGISLATION IS RECOMMENDED
Suggests Uniform By-laws for National Banks, to Compel Directors to Attend Majority of Board Meetings in Year or Be Ineligible for Re-election

Washington, Dec. 29.—Comptroller Williams, of the Currency Bureau, submitted his annual report to Congress to-day. It covers the beginning of the transition from the old national banking system to the new federal reserve system, as well as the operations of more than 7,000 national banks which have become part of the new system since his last annual report was made.

Aside from reviewing the provisions of the new bank law and the steps by which it was put into operation, the Comptroller makes some recommendations for new legislation. They are: An amendment to require uniform by-laws for national banks. In that connection the Comptroller declares many bank directors fail to direct and says any director who does not attend a majority of board meetings in a year should be ineligible for re-election.

Washing of Bank Bills

An amendment to permit signatures on national bank notes to be printed instead of made with pen and ink, which would permit the bills to be washed and restored to circulation.

That national banks be required to limit their deposits to ten times their combined capital and surplus.

That the Comptroller be empowered to remove, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, any director or officer of a national bank, guilty of violating any of the more important provisions of the bank law and direct that suit be brought against them in the name of the bank to recover for the results of any malfeasance in office.

Of the Federal Reserve act and what it is expected to accomplish for the finance and commerce of the country the Comptroller says:

Curing Weaknesses of System.
"The Federal reserve act is designed not only to cure weaknesses and defects of the currency system under which we have struggled, and sometimes staggered, in the past, as we have outgrown the conditions and passed beyond the circumstances which it was especially provided to meet, but to offer to the people of this country many new advantages and opportunities, while emancipating business from many evils, difficulties and troubles with which it has been burdened and from which it has found no escape."

At some length the Comptroller reviews the activities of governmental agencies to aid the financial and business world during the stress and strain of the European war. He covers practically the same ground as Secretary McAdoo did in his recent report to Congress. The remainder of the Comptroller's report is given over to statistics.

26,765 Banks Doing Business

There were 26,765 banks reporting to State and Federal officers in the United States at the close of business on June 30. Those banks, including all kinds, had aggregate resources of $26,971,398,031, showing an increase of more than $1,200,000,000 in the year. There were 772 more banks reporting than the year previous. The banks showed loans and discounts amounting to $15,388,357,284 with individual deposits subject to check without notice amounting to $9,539,573,744. They held gold coin and gold certificates totalling more than $912,000,000. Within the year ended October 31, 1914, the Comptroller says, 319 applications were received from persons wishing to organize national banks. Of these 226 were approved.

Says Purse Was Not Stolen

In justice to her little daughter, Mrs. John Weiger, of 1340 Penn street, said this morning that a wrong impression has gained circulation in connection with the recent disappearance of the pocketbook of Mrs. William Filling, containing $505. Mrs. Weiger says the pocketbook, which was handed to Detective White when he called at the Weiger home, was not stolen, but that the little girl picked it up after having tramped upon it in an upstairs store. The pocketbook was returned to Mrs. Filling with the contents intact.
